May invade Hungary.
London, March 27.—Russia today for the third time holds the gates to Hungary and British observers are virtually unanimous in the expectation that the Teutonic allies will make a supreme effort to prevent the Russian forces from again pouring onto the Hungarian plains.Mongre reports from Vienna indicate that there is some depression in Austria on account of the fall of Przemysl, but on the other hand papacy denies that this has resulted in an overtone from Emperor Francis Joseph to obtain the intervention of the pope on behalf of a separate peace.No New Combatants.
The fall of the Austrian stronghold in Galicia also has had the effect of sudden developments in the near eastern situation, but so far Italy and the Balkan states are still stubbornly "sitting on the fence."
The only advance of the allies along the western front consists of the capture by Belgian forces to the north of St. George.In England the labor unrest again has manifested itself. In this connection the belief is growing that the government soon will make some moves to restrict striking.New Russian Operations.
Berlin, via Brussels, March 27.— The conclusion appears to be justified today that the Russian advance on Mempel on the Baltic in East Prussia had a certain connection with the general renewal of Russian offensive activity, the purpose of which, according to military opinion in Berlin, appears to have been another threat against East Prussia.This offensive activity is taken in Berlin to indicate the Russians have finished filling out the gaps in their line caused by the latest victory over them by Von Hindenburg, and they are now ready for new operations.News reaching Berlin indicates despairate fighting is still going on there.Spain Remains Neutral.
Madrid, March 27.—Marquis De Lama, the foreign minister, has come out in the open with severe criticism of that portion of the Spanish press which is conducting a campaign against Portugal. These newspapers, the foreign minister declares, are willing to distort facts, a course which in time is bound to destroy the amicable relations existing between the two countries.After the cabinet meeting yesterday Premier Dato denied that the call of 30,000 men to the colors was the result of discord with any nation whatsoever."Spain," the premier said, "will continue to guard a most absolute neutrality."Invaders Expelled.
The Russian offensive movement against the East Prussian territory to the north of Tilsit came to its end last Friday at Krotzendorf and Jakubow. Steps have been taken to guard the inhabitants of this district against further invasion of this kind.Operations in Egypt.
Cairo, Egypt, March 26, via London. 27.—An official statement of the military situation in Egypt was issued as follows today.
In the British losses in skirmishes in the desert from March 25, three men killed and 16 wounded. The enemy left on the field about 50 killed and carried away nearly all the wounded. The British also captured show that this Turkish force has retreated to Nekhi.German Air Raids.
Paris, March 27.—Both Calais and Dunkirk were visited by German monoplanes this morning, but neither owned were damaged. Six bombs were thrown on Dunkirk and one on Calais.Dardanelles Forts Levelled.
Paris, March 27.—It now has been established that the forts at Dardanelles have been destroyed, and those at Kilid Bahr seriously damaged by the operations of the allied fleet in the Dardanelles, says a Havas dispatch from Athens dated Friday.Sailing ships engaged in mine sweeping were fired upon by Turkish field artillery posted at Erenkeur, and the batteries are said to have been silenced by fire from the two battleships.According to a dispatch from Mytilene, three British and two French war ships have anchored in the Gulf of Smyrna with transports.

SYRIAN CHRISTIANS. PERSECUTED BY TURKS, TAKE REFUGE HERE

Dormitory of Presbyterian mission at Urumiah, Persia.
According to late dispatches from Tiflis, fifteen thousand Syrian Christians have taken refuge under the protection of the American Presbyterian mission station at Urumiah, Persia. Turkish regular troops and Kurds are persecuting and massacring the Syrians. The picture shows the dormitory of the mission, which is now swarming with refugees.

War News Summary

Decisive action by Italy is regarded in Rome as imminent. A brief dispatch from that city today states the Italian government has taken every possible measure preparatory to beginning war on the side of the allies.
It was also said in Rome that there is an observable tendency on the part of Bulgaria to adopt a policy favorable to the allies, and that the government hopes to act in conjunction with Italy and Roumania.The attitude of Bulgaria has been in doubt on account of her hostility toward the other Balkan nations with the exception of Turkey which grew out of the second Balkan war.
Prince George of Greece is leaving Italy for Athens to support the policy of his brother, King Constantine, for the continued neutrality of his nation in position to the faction which favors intervention on the side of the allies.Dispatches reached Paris from Athens, saying the Turkish forts at Dardanelles and Kilid Bahr on the Dardanelles which attacked mine-sweepers, had been silenced by two battleships of the allies. British and French warships are said to have taken on transports to the Gulf of Smyrna on the coast of Asia Minor.Notwithstanding the reported success of the British in repelling the Turkish invaders of Egypt, the Turks have not been expelled from the country. An official statement from Cairo says that a skirmish occurred on Tuesday with small losses on both sides.Reports continue to come in of important Russian successes in the Carpathians. Swiss newspapers publish dispatches that the Russians have defeated the Austrians in several engagements along the front from Bukowina to western Galicia.The German war office announced that a Russian attempt to attack Tilsit, East Prussia, as was done in the recent dash across the border to Mem-el, has been defeated.Hartmann-Wellerkopf, a height in the Vosges, the possession of which the French and Germans have been fighting for several weeks, has been won by the French. Aviators of Germany and the allies threw bombs yesterday on several towns at widely separated points along the western front, including Calais and Strassburg.APOLOGIZE TO KAREL

Berlin, March 27.—The Berliners, notwithstanding the war, are still marrying and giving in marriage at almost their usual rate. In December the number of marriage licenses issued was 1,421, which was only 12 less than for December, 1913.
The number of babies born in December was also about the same as for the previous year. On the other hand, the deaths numbered 306 more than in December 1913, which was probably due to the mortality in the numerous military hospitals located here. Traffic on the street cars shows only a moderate reduction. At the savings-banks a still more satis-

Be Considered By Assembly
Committee on Tuesday.[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., March 27.—Two of the most important hearings in the legislature next week will be on Governor Philipp's bill to create a central board of education of thirteen members to take the place of the state boards of normal and university regents, and the three days of hearings that are scheduled on the anti-vice bill pending before the assembly.
The assembly committee on education will take up the Philipp educational bill on Tuesday, and the senate committee on education and public welfare will begin the hearings on the vice bill the same day.The Cunningham bill asking for an appropriation of $25,000 to purchase the site for the location of a home for crippled children will be heard by the joint committee on finance on Thursday afternoon and Thursday evening the committee will hear arguments on the financial bills of the assembly chamber. On next Wednesday afternoon the senate committee will hold a hearing on the Actley bill to exempt farmers from the provisions of the workmen's compensation act, and on Thursday there will be a further hearing on Senator Culbertson's bill relating to hazing.In the assembly all of the agricultural bills will be given a hearing on Thursday. This hearing includes the bills to abolish the present board of agriculture and the committee bill for the creation of a new consolidated board, recommended by the special legislative investigation committee.Other Matters Listed.
The assembly committee on elections will hear arguments on Thursday on the Waldron joint resolution

Brownsville, Texas, March 27.—The Villa siege of Matamoris, the Mexinoon today. Cavalrymen opened a heavy rifle fire on the breastworks west of Matamoris near the Rio Grande. Simultaneously the cavalry, totaling 5,500 men began spreading out to surround the city on the west and south. A Villa officer told the artillery is due to reach the firing line shrapnel shells will fall in Brown-

Dredger California Arrives on Scene to Take Charge of Raising Sub-

Today.[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Honolulu, March 27.—The lost submarine F-4, which sank outside the harbor entrance, should be raised late this afternoon if all goes well, according to a statement made by Captain of the Yard Duffy last night. Duffy says he believes there is fighting chance to save the lives of the men imprisoned in the submarine on the ocean floor.The raising of the submarine was held up temporarily while the cables attached to the submerged craft are tested.Plain to Raise Craft.
The dredger California, dispatched from the Pearl Harbor naval station in response to a radio gram, reached the scene at midnight, but did not begin work immediately. The dredger will work with the Alert, mothership of the submarine flotilla.The pontoon system probably will be used to raise the F-4. Five chains will be passed under the bow and stern of the sunken submarine, and as the dredger sinks into the water and the chains tighten, the water will then be pumped out of the dredger causing her to rise higher in the water, thus providing lifting power to raise the submarine.Honolulu, March 27.—After a night of unremitting labor, those in charge of the fleet of vessels engaged in raising the United States submarine, F-4, from the ocean floor outside the entrance to Honolulu harbor, where it was submerged Thursday, believe they were nearing the end of their task. Practically all hope of saving the 21 men trapped had been abandoned.When late yesterday the attempt to tow the submarine to shallow waters was abandoned, the naval tender, Alert, was dispatched to the scene and it was decided to raise the damaged craft by means of the crane, with which the tender is equipped.The Alert is anchored at 100 feet of water, 500 feet from the resting place of the submarine, and it is now planned to draw the hull Alert's anchorage, where divers may operate.NO EMPLOYMENT FOR BELGIAN REFUGEESUnable to House or Support Belgians in Holland or England—Number Hundred and Eight Thousand.[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, March 27.—The problem of providing employment and proper habitations for the Belgian refugees both in Holland and in England, is daily growing more urgent, in the opinion of Percy Alden, Member of Parliament who has represented the British Government in its dealings with the refugee question since the beginning of the war.The number of Belgian refugees in England is now officially admitted, according to a Government statement in the House of Commons, at 130,000, not including 18,000 wounded soldiers in British hospitals.
This total consists of 55,000 men, 69,000 women, and 46,000 children under sixteen."I feel very strongly," says Mr.
Alden, in a statement to the public,
"that, through the lack of work and proper housing, these Belgians run a serious risk of returning home at the end of the war in a demoralized and destitute condition. In Holland the method of dealing with the refugees is still of a temporary and unsatisfactory nature; they are living in churches, schools, barracks and in the open air. The food they are receiving is not too good. As to the employment question, little or no attempt has been made to deal with it, either in Holland or England."I have made several visits to Holland at the request of the President of the Local Government Board, to investigate conditions there. Kingdom, and I have seen a very serious and very awkward task, but a serious attempt will have to be made, and that soon, to provide remunerative work and adequate residence for these people.My belief is that the next step should be the building of some thousands of wooden huts, each containing three rooms, which could be constructed by the refugees themselves, and could be taken to deserted places at the end of the war and transferred to various parts of Belgium to be used as dwellings until permanent homes can be built. The building of the huts could be made to provide work for many thousands of refugees. I calculate that at least $500,000 will be required for the adequate launching of this scheme. It is the only way I know in which a proper semblance of family life can be restored to these Belgians during their temporary exile from their own country."PORTION OF PULP MILL

DESTROYED OWN FORTS

Austrians Blew Up Interior Fortifica-

Fortress Was Doomed.[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] London, March 27.—Reuter Telegram company has received a dispatch from its correspondent at Kiev, Russia, saying that General Von Kusmanek, the Austrian officer who commanded the fortress at Przemysl, has arrived there a prisoner and has been assigned to quarters.Przemysl, Galicia, March 23, via Petrograd, March 27, and London.— The night preceding the surrender to the Russians of the Austrian fortified position at Przemysl was hideous in the Russian lines with the roar of guns and shock of exploding shells.
Never on this frontier during the war has there been such a bombardment.
Standing outside the walls of the fallen fortress today, a correspondent of the Associated Press heard the story of the besiegers while the smoke of battle was still hanging in heavy clouds overhead.A Terrible Bombardment.
The night of March 21 and 22 the Austrians maintained a desperate fire upon the Russian position. The hut in which the Russian staff officers had their headquarters shook like a top and the ground for miles around trembled as though rent by an unending series of earthquakes.All night long the sky was red with the bursting shells. The cannonading reached its greatest intensity between four and six o'clock in the morning. It is said to say that nobody in either army slept that night, although a loud and incessant roar of the bombardment. During these two hours 10,000 shells were fired.Before dawn a scouting division of Russians drove back the Austrians from the trenches. Backing up this movement, the Russian army facing the Austrians began to close in on them.
As this advance was made the Austrians from all sides retired to protection of the fortress.

CLOSE MANAGEMENT CONTEST MONDAY AT Y. M. C. A. BUILDING

Rock County Farmers Will Convene in Morning and Afternoon With Commercial Club Hosts at Dinner.

Monday is closing day in Rock county for the big state farm management contest, which has been in progress since early last spring. At ten o'clock Monday morning, the forty-two Rock county farmers, contestants in the big event, will assemble at the Y. M. C. A. building, when they will be told how the data from throughout the state was worked up and how the winners were picked. Each farmer will be told his weakness and how to improve this year.

At noon, the Commercial club will entertain at a dinner in the association dining hall for the farmers and their wives, who are to be counted in as contestants also. The repeat will be followed by a big meeting at one-thirty, at which time every farmer in the county, whether he be a contestant or not, is invited to attend. The values of the farm management contest will be shown by illustrations, and the 1915 contest, that is, the contest for the United States agricultural department will be a speaker, along with D. H. Otis, assistant dean of the College of Agriculture of the Wisconsin university. Prizes will be awarded at this afternoon meeting to the three Rock county contest winners, these winners to represent Rock county in the state meeting to be held later at Grand Rapids, where they will contest for state honors.

CITY DELIVERY PLAN LIKED BY MERCHANTS

Lansing, Mich., Man Will Operate New System Here Beginning About April Twelfth.

On or about April 12th Janesville housewives are promised no more worrying as to whether or not the food for dinner or the groceries ordered early in the morning will arrive on time for the mid-day meal. Furthermore she is promised no more trouble whatever as to delinquent delivery from downtown stores is to be inaugurated. Those behind the move promise efficient service and satisfaction to both merchant and housewife.

Lansing, Mich., has been in the city with the idea of interesting Janesville merchants in a system of delivery through which they will eventually eliminate a large per cent of the cost of automobile and wagon operation. Mr. Strupe's idea is for a single city-wide delivery company which would establish various routes, make a certain number of deliveries each day and be far more dependable than the individual stores at the present time. Quite a number of merchants think much of the plan and are backing Mr. Strupe. Already maps of the city have been gone over, nine routes decided upon and much of the equipment delivered will be made daily. Three will come during the morning at 7:15, 8:30 and 10:30, and two in the afternoon at 2:30 and 4:30. Any article of one hundred pounds or less will be accepted by the firm which will be known as the Janesville Delivery company.

According to Mr. Strupe similar cities of the past have proved highly efficient in cities of the east, having populations varying from 1,400 to 48,000. For the past four years he has managed the company at Lansing and will then be in direct charge of the local concern.

Packages will be collected from the various stores and brought to a central distributing point where they will then be assorted and made ready for respective routes.

If you should ask your druggist for a bottle of "Allen's Cough Balm," and he tells you that he has something better or is "just out," don't be persuaded to take something on which he makes a little more profit, but insist upon having "Allen's Cough Balm," if necessary go elsewhere for it.

FRIDAY'S MARKET.

Chicago, March 27.—The closing hog market yesterday was strong and 10¢ higher than late Thursday. Armour was a free buyer at $6.65. President H. H. Halliday of the Michigan State Live Stock Board, was here yesterday and raised the embargo against Chicago shipments into Michigan.

Yesterday's trade in fat cattle was unevenly lower due to lack of eastern demand. Jewish holidays next week curtailed orders.

Receipts for today are estimated at 100 cattle, 6,000 hogs and 2,000 sheep, against 40 cattle, 6,275 hogs and 3,861 sheep a week ago and 140 cattle, 6,312 hogs and 3,566 sheep corresponding Saturday a year ago.

Average price of hogs at Chicago was $6.65, against $6.75 Thursday, $6.83 a week ago, $8.56 a year ago, $8.19 two years ago and $7.83 three years ago.

Fat Steers Lower. The 1,000 cattle received yesterday met with an indifferent demand at steady to lower prices, some fat steers as much as 10¢ lower. Cows generally steady and calves 25¢ higher. Quotations: Choice to fancy steers... $7.70@8.80. Poor to good steers... 6.00@7.65. Yearling steers, fair to fat... 6.75@8.85. Fat cows and heifers... 4.50@7.80. Native bulls and stags... 3.25@4.40. Poor to fancy calves... 7.25@10.50.

Week's Hog Run Small. After a week start yesterday's hog market advanced sharply and finished strong. Better trade in cash product and higher prices on change for futures helped conditions. Week's receipts of hogs are smallest in five months. Quotations: Bulk of sales... $6.60@6.70. Heavy butchers and ship-ping butchers... 6.65@6.75. Light butchers... 6.60@6.75. Light bacon, 145@150 lbs... 6.50@6.72 1/2. Heavy packing, 260@400 lbs... 6.45@6.65. Mixed packing, 200@250 lbs... 6.50@6.65. Rough, heavy packing... 6.25@6.40. Poor to best pigs, 60@135 lbs... 5.50@6.40. Stags, 80 lbs. dockage per head... 5.75@6.15.

Lamb Prices Steady. Practically no sheep were on sale and the limited supply of lambs went at steady prices compared with Thursday. Best woolled Colorado cels steady at $10.00 Monday and a week ago. Quotations for woolled: Lambs, common to fancy... $8.25@9.85. Yearlings, poor to good culls... 7.35@8.20. Wethers, poor to fancy... 7.90@9.15. Ewes, inferior to choice... 7.25@8.15. Bucks, common to choice... 6.50@8.50. Shorn stock quotable $1.25@1.75 below woolled offerings.

DAIRY CATTLE JUDGE APPOINTED FOR FAIR

Hugh Van Pelt, Dairy Magazine Editor of Waterloo, Ia., Named by Board Last Evening.

Farmers owning high class dairy cattle and contemplating exhibiting at the Janesville fair next August will be interested in the announcement of the board of directors today to the effect that Hugh Van Pelt, of Waterloo, Ia., managing editor of Kimball's Dairyman, will do the judging in the dairy cattle department. The local exhibit is practically the first county fair at which Mr. Van Pelt will be acting as judge, whereas his services being so much in demand for the big state attractions of similar nature. The Waterloo man is an expert authority on dairy cattle. Aside from the judging work, he will also deliver a number of lectures on this particular subject.

The naming of superintendents and judges of the various other departments is at present being considered by the board. At the regular meeting held last evening the matter of permitting the Janesville fair final baseball club to have the use of the park grounds for Sunday baseball was discussed. It was finally decided that the Cardinal management would be permitted the use of the diamond and grandstand providing an understanding relative to the financial end, was reached. On consideration of the contract, if the baseball men take the grounds, will be no smoking in the grandstand. The distance of the streets of the Park association from adequate fire protection, warrants this move, according to a member of the board this morning.

Two of the best free acts in the country will be put on by the fair directors. One will be a sensational tumbling and acrobatic act. Some of the features is promised. The entertainers being well known athletes and highly proficient in their respective lines. The second free act will include three excellent features, five women composing the company. Expectations are that the premium lists will be ready for mailing by May first as originally planned. Already much of the copy is in the hands of the printer, ready to be set in type. In the premium book this year the directors promise something new and air in advance of any similar publication heretofore published.

Curse of Idleness. Idleness is the badge of gentry, and the bane of body and mind, the nurse of naughtiness, the stepmother of discipline; the chief author of all mischief, one of the seven deadly sins, the cushion upon which the devil chiefly reposes.

QUIT SNORING

Mrs. Jacobson, 1831 Palm-wood lane, Toledo, Ohio, writes: "When I wrote you for advice I had been sick for three years, and had been treated by three doctors, but did not get well. I was very nervous and had trouble with my throat. Often I could not breathe through my nose, and had pains on both sides of the chest and a short cough. I had palpitation of the heart and internal calarh. My appetite was poor, I was always cold, and had gurgling in the bowels. I took Peruna according to directions, and now feel that I am cured. Peruna has cured me. I have never been as healthy as I am now, and I do all my work. The pain in the shoulder and chest is all gone. The medicine has done me much good. I shall always keep it in the house." Address The Peruna Co., Columbus, O., for a free copy of "The Ills of Life."

ROCK PRAIRIE MEN GUESTS AT BANQUET

Ninety-three Men Are Entertained by 25 County Y. M. C. A. Boys Last Evening—Hear Fine Speeches.

A delightful banquet in which the men of Rock Prairie were guests was given last evening at Rock Prairie by the rural Y. M. C. A. members of that place. Ninety-three men and twenty-five boys attended. The banquet and program that followed was given to urge co-operation in the community, and to further the Y. M. C. A. rural activities. E. J. McFarlane of Rock Prairie acted as toastmaster. George Hull of Johnston gave a fine talk on the needs of good roads. W. B. Austin of Rock Prairie gave a fine course on the organizing of a lime club in that community, his talk being followed with an address by J. A. Craig of this city, who contended that the co-operative spirit was ideal for a country spot, and he explained his thought by noting several of the good results that come from that sort of spirit.

A short business meeting followed. A motion was passed that the Rock Prairie group and men organize some sort of a community interest club. A committee to promote this cause, composed of Robert Madden, P. J. McFarlane, W. B. Austin, George Clark and J. Z. McElay was chosen.

START GRADING WORK ON RESIDENCE STREETS

Improvements were made during the last week on a number of residence streets by the street department, grading work being done with the drag. The following streets were dragged: Ravine, Chatham, Eastern avenue, State, Forest Park boulevard, Harrison, Glen, McKee boulevard, and North Main. Further grading and cleaning will be done before the streets are to be oiled. The contract for eighty thousand gallons of street oil will be let within the next two weeks and an early start on the season's work is looked for. Petitions will be received by the council authorizing the work, and an order is expected for the oiling of many of the paved highways.

SPORTS

"CHAMP VS. CHAMP" MEANS HARD FIGHT

History of Ring Shows That Good Big Man Can Whip a Good Light Man.

Bantam champion Kid Williams appears to be dissatisfied with his showing against Johnny Kilbane and is seeking another bout with the feather king. The time for a longer match and a twenty round mill would be to the Baltimore terror's liking. When "champ" meets "champ" implies that there will be a desperate struggle as the best fighter of the division is bound to meet a tenacious tussle with the champion of the other.

Although Kilbane beat Williams decisively, the contest was a very spectacular one. Kilbane, contrary to expectations, stood right up to the little Baltimore buzzsaw and fought him with both hands. He never backed up a step. Kilbane is a great champion, far better than he is given credit for. He is a miniature Fitzsimmons in build and he can resemble him in punishing power when he wants to. Johnny can hit faster than any man in the business. The lightning rapidity of his blows defies the eye. But it was his tremendous reach that stood him in the greatest stead against the bantam king.

Poling is something about the weight title holder. He attempted to wrest the lightweight crown from the Irish brow of Jack McAuliffe. They fought in Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 1, 1914, for $500 a side and a championship belt. 133 pounds, ski gloves. The battle lasted twenty-eight furious rounds, when Gilmore's backers gave up because of his brutal nose. McAuliffe was all in and nearly blinded at the time. Light weight Champion Kid Lavigne, feared no man, big or little, black or white. While champion he fought two other heavy champions. The Kid met the welterweight champion Tommy Ryan, in a no-decision contest in 1906, and three years later met Mysterious Billy Smith, who held the crown at that time. Billy Smith was a notoriously rough and foul fighter, and he was too much for little Lavigne, who battled desperately, but in vain, as he was forced to give up in the fourteenth round.

Frank Brown, a frail-built chap, wasn't afraid of any one, either. While he was lightweight champion he fought the then welterweight title holder, Rube Ferns. They met at only other instances of champions fighting champions.

Everyone knows of that famous battle between Corbett and Fitzsimmons. It was a battle. Fitz was the middleweight champion at the time, and Corbett had the heavy crown. Fitz received a terrible licking for the first ten rounds. He was knocked down and almost out once and things looked very bad for him indeed until he caught Corbett with the celebrated solar-plexus blow in the fourteenth round.

Another battle between world's champions was Nelson vs. Atell. This was one of the greatest fights ever seen in the west. Atell, with nothing to lose, slugged with the rugged battler all the way, and was given a draw for his good work.

It was a short but furious contest between Featherweight Champion McGovern and Lightweight Champion Ernie. Ernie, weakened by the low weight he was forced to make, could not withstand the terrific rushes of the little McGovern. Fitz was knocked out in the third round.

Ketchel and Johnson was the last battle of champions previous to Kilbane and Williams. It was a thrilling affair with a double climax in the last round, the twelfth. Little Ketchel, outwitted by nearly sixty five pounds, sailed into the big smoke with all his fury. It was useless, however, as Johnson's long arms and great strength enabled him to easily hold Steve off. In the twelfth Ketchel shifted and caught Jack full force on the jaw. If the blow had landed squarely Steve would have been heavyweight champion. As it was, it dropped Johnson on his back. Humiliated and infuriated, the black champion swung up a terrible blow as he rose and caught Ketchel unexpectedly, and laid him low for the long count.

It would seem from the above results of mingling champions that the old saying has been vindicated; that a good big man can whip a good little man.

CARDINALS ARE SET FOR MATCH TONIGHT

Company E Team Arrives and are Confident of Trimming the Lakota Five for State Title.

The Company E team of Fond du Lac express marked confidence that they will give the Lakota Cardinals a trimming in the game tonight at the Auditorium on their arrival in this city this noon. The Company E bunch have recuperated from the effects of their tour and are in prime condition to play their best basketball.

This team is certain not to be a fluke, like the Harringtons, for they have Thompson, noted forward of the Lawrence College five, and Fogarty, the veterans captain, with a trio of the company regulars, who are all and fast. All the team carry a reputation of being hard men in the game with plenty of ability in the intense game, or more adequately termed as "tough-housing." The Fond du Lac team laughed at the claim of the Harringtons for the state title, and on being asked why they did not play the Harringtons they replied "they are too easy."

It is a sure bet they will not find the Cardinals easy tonight, and the Janesville fans see a victory. Press reports from Fond du Lac give credit that the Company E's expect to trounce the Cardinals and eliminate them for any claim for the state title. Also remarks come from Belvidere that the Illinois team never had hopes of defeating the Fond du Lac, and no hope could be seen for the Cardinals as Belvidere beat Janesville in two games out of three. The Belvidere scribe evidently overlooked the fact that Atwood and Falter were not in the last game, which was lost by two points, and it would be a sorry day that Atwood could not have added the needed points to the score over a team guard like Belvidere has been playing.

The Lakotas will present their strongest team of the season tonight with a chance of having Chandler playing forward. Korst may play at this position, but if Chandler is obtained Manager Caldwell estimates that victory is assured. Atwood will be at the other forward, with Hemming center, Dalton and Edler guards, with Ryan and Falter in reserve. Edler will probably be pitted against Fogarty, with Dalton guarding Thompson. Langdon will referee the match.

Eddie Holloway, the Giants' infield recruit from the Three B's league, is laid up at Marlin as the result of an operation made necessary by a strain in his groin and is not likely to take part in any more practice work.

Will Jack Coombs Show Old Form?

Jack Coombs.

Glowing reports from the training camp of the Brooklyn club reveal one of the greatest pitchers in the game in the role of a "come-back." Jack Coombs, the famous iron man of the Athletics and hero of a world series, is again as good as ever, if training camp form is any indication.

Over in Brooklyn the fans are hugging themselves with joy, for with a little good pitching the hopefuls can hear the clapping of the pennant. But the Brooklyn fans are not alone in their joy. Faithful followers of Jack can be found in every city, and admirers of his great deeds are in every grandstand.

It was not age that put Coombs out of the game. Typhoid fever laid him low in 1913, and things looked mighty bad for Mack's star. When at last he was free from the sick bed he was left suffering with a weak side that proved most obstinate to treatment.

NEW CHANGE IN DATE FOR JOHNSON FIGHT

Will Decide Heavyweight Championship on Easter Monday Instead of Sunday.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Havana, March 27.—The fight between Jack Johnson and Jack Willard, which had been scheduled to take place here on April 4 for the heavyweight championship of the world, has been postponed until Monday, April 5.

BELOIT COLLEGE NINE STARTS ON TRAINING TOUR IN THE SOUTH.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Beloit, Wis., March 27.—The Beloit College base ball team started on its ten-day training trip through the south today. The following games will be played:

March 30—Southwestern Presbyterian university, Clarksville, Tenn.
March 31—Christian Brothers' college, St. Louis.
April 1, 2, 3—University of Illinois, Urbana.
April 5—Purdue at Lafayette, Ind.
April 6—Northwestern university at Evanston.

The intercollegiate schedule this year will be unusually light as a provision of the new rule barring freshmen from athletic competition automatically severed athletic relations with other institutions who do not have this rule.

Pitcher Earl Hamilton of the St. Louis Browns has been playing hand ball to convince himself and Manager Riskey that the shoulder he broke last fall is all right. There appears to be nothing wrong with it, and if Hamilton's disposition improves, as he says it will, the Kansas' southpaw may again take his place among the stars of the American league.

Eddie Fitzpatrick, the Toronto second baseman sold to the Boston Braves and who at first refused to report, has changed his mind. He wanted more money than was offered him by St. Louis, but soon became convinced that this is not a big money year for recruits.

Charley Herzog of the Reds having found that he could switch to a new position in the infield and make good at it, is now trying the same plan with Henry Groh, who has been moved over to third base, with Ivan Olson taking second.

PAIGE

"The Standard of Value and Quality"

Be Sure It's a Paige

It makes no difference whether it be the Glenwood Four '36' or the Fairfield Six '46.'

They are both Paige cars—both "the standard of value and quality."

You, alone, must decide whether your needs call for a seven passenger, six-cylinder car of 124 inch wheel base; or a four-cylinder car of 116 inch wheel base seating five people.

A choice between these two cars should be governed entirely by your requirements. But—whether four or six cylinders—be sure it's a Paige. That name is the most important thing you can buy.

If it's a Paige it means that you are buying more dollar for dollar value than can be found anywhere else in the automobile market.

If it's a Paige it means that "you can't buy more—you won't be satisfied with less."

Pride of ownership—Satisfaction—Service. These are the really important things that you can buy in a Paige car.

So, make your choice—but be sure it's a Paige.

Louis B. Keane, Harvard's 15-year-old prodigy, has a more laudable college ambition than grinding for a flock of A's in his studies, many athletes think. Lou has announced that he will report for the Harvard freshman crew when the candidates are called. He weighs 105 pounds and will try for coxswain. Keane is the youngest student in Harvard and the only one wearing knickerbockers.

Pitcher Lew Richie, who has been seriously ill in a hospital at Williamsport, Pa., is reported as now on the road to recovery and may yet be able to play ball this year.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

The bread that bringeth strength I want to give.
The water pure that bids the thirsty live.
I want to help the fainting day by day;
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.
I want to give the oil of joy for tears.
The faith to conquer crowding doubts and fears.
Beauty for ashes may I give always;
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.
I want to give good measure running o'er.
And into angry hearts I want to pour
The answer soft that turneth wrath away.
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.
I want to give to others hope and faith.
I want to do all that the Master saith;
I want to live aright from day to day;
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

The ambition which prompted the choice sentiment expressed in this little poem is so suggestive of helpfulness, through practical service, that it is worthy of more than passing thought. If this creed was generally adopted the world would soon be revolutionized.

It will be noticed that this creed provides for giving and helping, without hope of reward or any material benefits are concerned. The kind of giving which does not hope to receive as much again.

The creed is so broad and liberal that people of every faith, and of no particular faith, may adopt it, with the satisfaction of knowing that when they go about doing good that they are rendering the highest order of service.

Next to President Wilson, the evangelist, "Billy Sunday," is commanding more attention today than any man in this country. When he opened his campaign in the old state city of Philadelphia, three months ago, the people said that while his methods might work all right in the wild and woolly west, that the east would not tolerate them, and failure was predicted.

He closed his meetings a week ago, and the most skeptical are forced to admit that the city has been stirred from center to circumference, not only with a religious, but by a wave of moral reform.

In speaking of his work he said that among his most ardent supporters were Catholic priests, who urged their people to attend his meetings, and learn some things which they had been trying to teach them for years. Mr. Sunday is sowing humanity by coming to the masses with a message which shakes them out of insensibility and lethargy, and causes them to think. He is not a teacher of theology, and his creed is as broad as the race. His ambition is to teach people a better way to live.

In one of his meetings a saloon-keeper and his bar-tender occupied a seat in the back end of the great tabernacle. Their place of business, near by, closed early for lack of patronage, and they went in to watch the performance, out of curiosity.

When the invitation came to "hit the sawdust trail," and the sales filled up with a great throng, on their way to the front to grasp the evangelist by the hand, the bar-tender said to his employer, "Come on Bill, I'm going!" "Going where?" said Bill. "Going down to shake the man by the hand and tell him I'm with him," was the reply. "Come on!" And a few minutes later they joined the procession for the front.

Similar instances happen in every city where Mr. Sunday works. The stuff club which he swings so effectively is needed to wake some people up, and when they come to their senses they are always grateful for the awakening.

Billy Sunday says that his creed, boiled down to a single sentence of eleven words, is: "I am against everything that the devil is in favor of." That he faithfully lives up to his creed is never questioned.

Sunday is in a class by himself, and while his work produces wonderful results, he can only reach a limited number of people, and the great world's vineyard always white for the harvest, will suffer loss unless individual workers assume responsibility.

Life are constantly being woven into the fabric which we call society. They may contribute to the best or the worst in the community. That is for us to determine, but the weaving process goes on.

It is worth while to be a helpful weaver, and to feel at the close of the day that some life has been cheered and brightened by contact in the passing. Here's a simple recipe for radiating good cheer, from the pen of Sam Walter Foss of the New York World:

"When you see a man in woe,
Walk straight up and say, 'Hello!'
Say 'Hello!' and 'How d'ye do?'
How's the world been using you?
Slap the fellow on his back,
Bring your hand down with a whack;
Bring your hand up and don't go slow, Slake his hand and say, 'Hello!'
Is he clothed in rags? Oh, ho!
Walk straight up and say, 'Hello!'
Rags and but a cotton roll
Just for wrapping up a soul;
And a soul is worth a true
Halo and hearty, 'How d'ye do?'
Don't wait for the crowd to go;
Walk straight up and say, 'Hello!'
"When big vessels meet, they say,
They salute and sail away;
Just the same as you and me,
Lonely ships upon the sea,
Beats out right up and don't go slow,
For a port beyond the fog;
Let your speaking-trumpet blow,
Lift your horn and cry 'Hello!'
Say 'Hello!' and 'How d'ye do?'
Other folks are good as you,
When you leave your house of clay,
Wandering in the far away,
Who you travel through the strange Country far beyond the range,
Then the souls you've cheered will know Who you be, and say, 'Hello!'

SNAP SHOTS

The show that tries to get the laughter through the medium of the "local" joke never is very funny in any other respect.

You can't fool a hostess by telling here you have had a "lovely" time. She knows whether you had or not.

The rule is that the easier the time a man has the less he amounts to. The desirable routes are all uphill.

If a woman's dreams came true life would be one long drawn out and un-speakable horror.

A man toils one-fourth of the time in order that he may live and the other three-fourths of the time in order that he may live in the manner which appeals to him.

It isn't so much that you don't know. The trouble is that you can't find out.

A corn is a little lump of agony placed on the foot to instruct us what size shoes we shall wear. In days gone by when a person with a number ten foot wore a number nine shoe there were no corns. The average crop today is about three corns per foot with now and then a bunion or two thrown in on the side. Corns probably have severed as many friendships as have hearts. To intrude upon one's heart may be wrong, but to intrude upon a corn is a crime.

Marie Doro in Her Greatest Stage Success, "The Morals of Marcus." That celebrated and popular young star, Marie Doro, one of the most charming actresses of the contemporary stage, makes her debut before the motion picture camera in the Famous Players Film Company's five-part film adaptation of her foremost stage successes, "The Morals of Marcus."

by William J. Locke, produced on the stage by Charles Frohman. Miss Doro's gifted impersonation of Carlotta, the refugee from the Turkish harem, is the nearest approach to hypnotism from the screen that one could imagine. She holds the audience spellbound under the witchery of her amazing art. By her grace and personality, and

"Money" a Capital and Labor Drama. "Money" is the root of all evil.

Illustrated in these under-sea "movies" which the Universal Film Company will present at Myers Theatre on March 26-27-28, are the adventures of a man who took his pictures in the crystal waters of the Bahama Islands, they discovered on the bottom of the sea the wreck of an old ship. One of the brothers, named a diver's outfit and went down to explore the wreck. What he found there is shown in the film taken in the submerged photographic chamber. This is but one of the curious and wonderful adventures shown in these first and only submarine motion pictures; native boys are seen picking up and struggling for pennies at the bottom of the sea; the various and beautiful coral formations pass in review before the eyes of the spectators; the sponge fishing industry is shown; sharks are seen in a bloody battle, and as climax to the engrossing film is a thrilling, sensational fight for life of a man against the dreaded blue shark of the Atlantic in which the man, in the last moments of his life, holds his breath and remains under water, giving the shark a death-thrust with a long-bladed knife. No one can see these subaqueous "movies" without being completely stimulated, refreshed, instructed, entertained and thrilled.

Official Washington observed Washington's birthday in a way that was unique. It was also patriotic and appropriate. Still more than that it was very instructive. Remembering that the Father of his country had adjured his successors "In Time of Peace, Prepare for War," they took advantage of a remarkable opportunity to see how the government was fulfilling the unwritten law for preparedness. It was the first opportunity of the kind that ever presented itself, and by a strange coincidence it came at just the time when the question "Are We Prepared?" is more momentous than at any time in the nation's history. The opportunity consisted of a special exhibition, starting at 11:00 a. m. at the Columbia theatre in Washington, when Lyman H. Howe presented the remarkable films depicting every phase of the United States Navy of 1915 from submarine to super-dreadnaught, including armament and armament which he will exhibit at the Myers Theatre on April 9th and 10th. Just how enthusiastically Howe's absorbing film was received by members of President Wilson's Cabinet and other officials of state, is best expressed in the following telegram sent to Mr. Howe immediately after the exhibition by Mr. Fred G. Berger, Manager of Washington's leading theatre: "Your special exhibition for official Washington this morning was a splendid success. Cabinet members, including Secretary Daniels and their families were in the very representative audience that crowded the theatre. Everyone was greatly delighted with the navy and other subjects shown in your new program. This afternoon we have the largest audience your Travel Festival has ever attracted at a matinee in Washington. Congratulations—Fred G. Berger."

"Quo Vadis," a superb photo drama reproduction of Henry Sienkiewicz's world famous novel, comes to the Myers Theatre next Wednesday, March 31, and it will establish a wonderful record for Janeville. These wonderful pictures will be seen, matinee and evening.

Aside from the many spectacular features there is an undeniable fascination about the story of "Quo Vadis," the passion for the sweet Lydia and the adage that the "course of true love never runs smooth, etc." is proven as far back as A. D. 66 and 68 by this very picture romance. It is human, and human nature is the same in all ages as it was in the days of Nero and all the other Caesars and Roman emperors. And that is what the public likes whether it is novels, dramas, paintings or photo dramas.

There has been much wonderment at the magnitude and beauty of some of the scenes, notably the interior and garden scenes. But the locale is Italy where landscape beauty is still a way to world sight. The Cines company of Italy is composed of many of the wealthiest men of Rome and the Bank of Italy is also said to be largely interested in the company. Many of the wealthy nobles are stockholders and when these pictures were being made the stockholders gave special permission for the use of their gardens and palaces. By this means many of the gorgeous scenes were produced with comparative ease whereas to have built the grounds and palaces especially for the picture would have cost several million dollars and rendered it a business impossibility. Special permission had to be obtained from the royal cabinet for the use of some of the buildings and assurances had to be given that none of the historic arabesques and marble would be damaged. Even with all the advantages at the disposal of the Cines company it is a wonderful achievement that could hardly be duplicated anywhere else than in "Eternal Rome." "Quo Vadis" furnishes amusement, instruction and inspiration and fully merits the great success it has achieved.

The appearance at the Myers Theatre of "A Pair of Sixes" Saturday, April 3, matinee and evening, is especially noteworthy for the reason that the presenting cast includes the original company which made the play so justly celebrated during its run at the Longboothan Theatre at the Cort Theatre, Chicago. It has also recently appeared at the Metropolitan in St. Paul for the week of January 10th, and in Minneapolis success equalled its triumph in the East. The company will shortly appear for a week each in Omaha, St. Louis, Kansas City, Denver, Salt Lake City, etc., so that the audience becomes obvious that the forthcoming engagement here will furnish all that is desirable both in matter of production and the ability of the actors concerned in the play. As it is quite evidently not an inferior number two company which so many producers sometimes send to the theatres on the so-called small time circuit, this is something which Mr. H. H. Prazee, has been very careful not to do. He considers the money of the patron in the smaller city of as great value as that which is laid down at the box office of the Metropolitan Play House. He thoroughly appreciates the good opinion of the entirely capable theatrical devotee who sees his productions in the "one night stands."

SIDE LIGHTS on THE CIRCUS BUSINESS

By D. W. WATT

(Copyrighted.) Last week in New York City, the will of the late W. W. Cole, the millionaire circus man who died on March 10, was probated. Mr. Cole died at his winter home at Baltimore Hotel, where he and his wife had resided during the winter for many years. The estate consisted of about $5,000,000, but $100,000 of which went to charity and the balance to the widow.

In the past week I have been able to gather full statistics as to the early life of Mr. Cole. His ancestors on both sides were circus people for generations back, and it was in 1836 that the father, W. H. Cole, accompanied by his wife, Mary Cook Cole, brought the first show across the ocean in a sailing vessel, and sailed in New York City. The show opened in New York City, Scotland, September 8, 1836, and landed in New York just six weeks later. As far as it is possible to learn, this was the first show to land in this country and consisted of 40 adults, 25 children, 48 ponies, with wardrobe and trappings of all kinds that went to make up a first class show. A week later the show opened in an old theatre building on the Bowery in New York City, where it enjoyed a successful run of four weeks.

From there the show went to Philadelphia, Boston and Baltimore, and shortly after opening a fire destroyed the theatre took fire, and was burned to the ground with all the wardrobe and stage settings and most of the animals in the basement, which were stabled in the basement. Mrs. Cole whose name was Cook, had many relatives in the business, who were famous riders in their day, including Henry Cook, and Woody Cook, the latter coming to this country about thirty-five years ago, where he remained several seasons traveling with the best shows on this side of the ocean. The passing of W. W. Cole, as far as I can learn ends the show career of the Coles and the Cooks in this country. W. W. Cole not only left for his pathway all through life a day by day, but he left a legacy of many of which can be recalled today by old timers in the business. It is said that his retirement from the business in New York City, that thousands of dollars had been given by Mr. Cole in a quiet way to old timers in the business, who are now down and out.

A few days ago a letter was received in this city from J. W. Longboothan, from Havana, Cuba. Mr. Longboothan has visited in Janeville several times, where he has many friends and in his letter gives a description of the two shows which are to start out from Havana this season under the management of Mr. Longboothan and the Ringlings.

The Publanos are the Ringlings in show business in Cuba, and start out two shows in different directions to two shows in country the coming season. Mr. Longboothan is manager of No. 2 show, and in his letter he describes the advancement that has been made in circus business in that country in the last few years. Among other improvements, they have two regular American built sleepers for the people, which are the first to be put in use by circus men in that country. Mr. Longboothan has the circus trains of that country, and this will be the first season that they will load and unload their trains by what they call pull-up teams, the same as they do in this country.

Their send out advance advertising car, where heretofore they had sent their advertisers a billed paper by express, and only two or three people to do the advertising ahead.

Mr. Longboothan adds that the American sleepers and the American way of loading and unloading the train, is a great curiosity in that country, and the newspapers speak of it as advertising "new American ideas" to the business of that country. When I first went to the Adam Forepaugh show, his youngest brother, Jack Forepaugh, was what was known as the boss animal man. He had an assistant who went by the name of "Reddy," a nickname given him on account of the color of his hair.

In conversation with Reddy one day, I found that he had been there four years, and he told me confidentially that he had expected long before that he would have charge of the menagerie and would be promoted to some better position, which he had thought he would be long before that Reddy said that when he got to be boss animal man, that he would be satisfied with that job to stay there as long as he lived. "And yet," said he, "I sometimes think that it never will come, for I have been assistant to Mr. Forepaugh now for four years."

But it was only a few weeks later that Jack Forepaugh was given the position of door tender at the main entrance, and Reddy proudly walked out to the ticket wagon and told me that I could put him on the pay roll as boss animal man, and that he was to receive the same salary that Mr. Forepaugh had which was nearly double what he had been getting. Whenever I had any friends come to the show, I would always take them in the menageries and introduce them to Reddy, and tell them that he had been with the show for several years, that he had become a helper, and now he had charge of the entire menagerie, which would always put a broad smile on Reddy's face. But he deserved all, for he had been a faithful servant from the start, and his one subject had been to get to the head of his profession, and that he did.

Reddy's job was all the year around and he was one of the principals in the winter quarters where many matters of importance were talked over during the winter, and any information wanted in the spring as to what had been done in the winter quarters during the winter could always be had from Reddy, for he was always brought into consultation when any change of importance was made. Reddy finished the season before Adam Forepaugh died, but what became of him later, I never knew. But he probably is with some show, for his kind were always in demand in the business. In 1857 the money conditions of the country were bad, and the government allowed the banks of the country for a time, at least, to issue their own bills. This seemed to give the counterfeiters the chance of their life, and it was not so long until the country was flooded with counterfeit money.

The Dan Rice circus was showing in a town of Illinois, when one of the patrons of the show received a counterfeit two dollar bill from the ticket wagon in change, or at least he wrote Dan Rice a letter two or three days later and claimed that the counterfeit bill was given him by his ticket agent, and wished him to send him another bill. Dan Rice put the letter in his pocket, and paid no attention to it, until the show closed in late fall, when he sat down and wrote the man saying that he hoped he would pardon him for the delay, but to tell him the truth, counterfeit two dollar bills had grown much scarcer later in the fall, and it was only a day or two before the close of the show that he was able to get hold of one, which he would enclose, and hoped that it would be satisfactory.

Miss Taliaferro will be remembered as a leading artist in such widely known Broadway productions as "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" and "Young Wisdom."

She is the younger sister of Mabel Taliaferro and this will be her first appearance on the screen. The story of "Young Romance" concerns the experiences of a young girl clerk in a department store who, in a fit of June madness, determines to pretend that she is a rich lady of fashion during a brief vacation of one week. In this manner Nellie Nolan transforms herself into Miss Ethel Van Dusen and proceeds to Ocean Beach, Me., there to live Croesus' money; he refuses to pay. Capital and Labor collide and in the end Labor emerges from the conflict with the honors of War.

Amusingness in its plot, its incidents, its cyclonic excitements "Money" outlines a plausible condition of affairs in modern society, or is supposed to take place. Maxilian has made himself the money power of his world, and is in no mood to accede to the demands of his men for equitable wages.

Lost or Buried Treasure is Subject of Eternal Fascination.

Nearly every man who has ever lived has at some time or other dreamed of hunting for buried treasure, hopeful of finding the carefully hidden fortune of Captain Kidd or Touch or other of the famous pirates that once infested the Spanish main. The day-dreams of nearly all boys from the ages of ten to eighteen are occupied by this fascinating subject, and many men delve and dig away a good share of their lives in actual hunts for the buried plunder. The treasure hidden away by pirates, however, is as nothing in comparison to the millions upon millions of dollars in coins, gold and silver bars, ivory and precious stones and jewels that have gone to the bottom of the ocean by the sinking of treasure ships. It may then become possible to locate, and soon recover, much of this lost treasure by means of the Williamson Submarine Tube such as was utilized by the Williamson Brothers in their sensational submarine motion pictures. Just how this may be done is il-

"I thought—" she began, and then her brow cleared. "I have been looking up the recitals in the morning paper. The same orchestra you heard last night is to appear again today at—"

"We will go there, Lydia," he interrupted, and at once began to hum the gay little air that had so completely

"Is it you, Lydia? Come up to my room."

The girl looked up and saw Mrs. Brood leaning over the banister rail. She was holding her pink dressing-gown closely about her throat, as if it had been hastily thrown about her shoulders. One bare arm was visible—completely so.

"I came to see Mr. Brood. Is he—"

"He is busy. Come up to my room," repeated Yvonne, somewhat imperiously.

As Lydia mounted the stairs she had a fair glimpse of the other's face. Always pallid—but of a healthy pallor—it was now almost ghastly. Perhaps it was the light from the window that caused it. Lydia was not sure, but a queer, greenish hue overspread the lovely, smiling face. The lips were red, very red—redder than she had ever seen them. The girl suddenly recalled the face she had once seen of a woman who was addicted to the drug habit.

Mrs. Brood met her at the top of the stairs. She was but half-dressed. Her lovely neck and shoulders were now almost bare. Her hands were extended toward the visitor; the filmy lace gown hung loose and disregarded about her slim figure.

"Come in, dear. Shall we have tea? I have been so lonely. One cannot read the books they print nowadays. Such stupid things, all—"

She threw an arm about the tall girl and Lydia was surprised to find that it was warm and full of a gentle strength. She felt her flesh tingle with the thrill of contact. Yes, it must have been the light from the window, for Yvonne's face was now aglow with the iridescence that was so peculiarly her own.

A door closed softly on the floor above them. Mrs. Brood glanced over her shoulder and upward. Her arm tightened perceptibly about Lydia's waist.

"It was Ranjab," said the girl, and instantly was filled with amazement. She had not seen the Hindu, had not even been thinking of him, and yet she was impelled by some mysterious intelligence to give utterance to a statement in which there was conviction, not conjecture.

"Did you see him?" asked the other, looking at her sharply.

"No," admitted Lydia, still amazed. "I don't know why I said that."

Mrs. Brood closed her boudoir door behind them. For an instant she stood staring at the knob as if expecting to see it turn—

"I know," she said, "I know why you said it. Because it was Ranjab." She shivered slightly. "I am afraid of that man, Lydia. He seems to be watching me all of the time. Day and night his eyes seem to be upon me."

"Why should he be watching you?" asked Lydia, bluntly.

Yvonne did not notice the question. "Even when I am asleep in my bed, in the dead hour of night, he is looking at me. I can feel it, though asleep. Oh, it is not a dream, for my dreams are of something or someone else—never of him. And yet he is there, looking at me. It—it is uncanny."

"An obsession," remarked Lydia, quietly. "He never struck me as especially omnipresent."

"Didn't you feel him a moment ago?" demanded Yvonne, irritably.

The other hesitated, reflecting. "I suppose it must have been something like that." They were still facing the door, standing close together. "Why do you feel that he is watching you?"

"I don't know. I just feel it, that's all. Day and night. He can read my thoughts, Lydia. He would read a book. Isn't that disgusting?" Her laugh was spiritless, obviously artificial.

"I shouldn't object to his reading my thoughts," said Lydia.

"Ah, but you are Lydia. It's different. I have thoughts sometimes, my dear, that would not—but there! Let us speak of more agreeable things. Sit down here beside me. No tea? A cigarette, then. No? Do you forgive me for what I said to you last night?" she asked, sitting down beside the girl on the chaise longue.

"It was so absurd, Mrs. Brood, that I have scarcely given it a moment's thought. Of course I was hurt at the time. It was so unjust to Mr. Brood."

It was—

"It is like you to say that," cried Yvonne. "You are splendid, Lydia. Will you believe me when I tell you that I love you? That I love you very dearly, very tenderly?"

Lydia looked at her in some doubt and not without misgivings. "I should like to believe it," she said, noncommittally.

"Ah, but you doubt it. I see. Well, I do not blame you. I have given you much pain, much distress. When I am far away you will be glad—you will be happy. Is not that so?"

"But you are coming back," said Lydia, with a frank smile, not meant to be unfriendly.

Yvonne's face clouded. "Oh, yes, I shall come back. Why not? Is this not my home?"

"You may call it your home, Mrs. Brood," said Lydia, "but are you quite sure your thoughts always abide here? I mean in the United States, of course."

Yvonne had looked up at her quickly. "Oh, I see. No, I shall never be an American." Then she abruptly

It was—

"No, I shall never be an American."

changed the subject. "You have had a nice day with Frederic? You have been happy, both of you?"

"Yes—very happy, Mrs. Brood," said the girl, simply.

"I am glad. You must always be happy, you two. It is my greatest wish."

Lydia hesitated for a moment. "Frederic asked me to be his wife—tomorrow," she said, and her heart began to thump queerly. She felt that she was approaching a crisis of some sort.

"Tomorrow?" fell from Yvonne's lips. The word was drawn out as if in one long breath. Then, to Lydia's astonishment, an extraordinary change came over the speaker. "Yes, yes, it should be—it must be tomorrow. Poor boy—poor boy! You will marry, yes, and go away at once, at—"

Oh, Mrs. Brood, is it for the best?" cried Lydia. "Is it the best thing for Frederic to do? I—I feared you might object. I am sure his father will refuse permission—"

"But you love each other—that is enough. Why ask the consent of anyone? Yes, yes, it is for the best. I know—oh, you cannot realize how well I know. You must not hesitate." The woman was trembling in her eagerness. Lydia's astonishment gave way to perplexity.

"What do you mean? Why are you so serious—so intent on this?"

"Frederic has no money," pursued Yvonne, as if she had not heard Lydia's words. "But that must not deter you. It must not stand in the way. I shall find a way, yes, I shall find a way. I—"

"Do you mean that you would provide for him—for us?" exclaimed Lydia.

"There is a way, there is a way," said the other, fixing her eyes appealingly on the girl's face, to which the flush of anger was slowly mounting. "His father will not help him—if that is what you are counting upon, Mrs. Brood," said the girl coldly.

"I know. He will not help him, no."

Lydia started. "What do you know about—that has Mr. Brood said to you?" Her heart was cold with apprehension. "Why are you going away next week? What has happened?"

Brood's wife was regarding her with narrowing eyes. "Oh, I see now. You think that my husband suspects that Frederic is too deeply interested in his beautiful stammerer—is that not so?" "Pshaw! It has nothing to do with it." Her eyes were sullen, full of resentment now. She was collecting herself.

The girl's eyes expressed the disdain that suddenly took the place of apprehension in her thoughts. A sharp retort leaped to her lips, but she suppressed it.

"Mr. Brood does not like Frederic," she said instead, and could have cut out her tongue the instant the words were uttered. Yvonne's eyes were glittering with a light that she had never seen in them before. Afterwards she described it to herself as baleful.

"So! He has spoken ill—evil—of his son to you?" she said, almost in a monotone. "He has hated him for years—is not that so? I am not the original cause, at—"

"Oh, I beg of you, Mrs. Brood—" began Lydia, shrinking back in dismay.

"You are free to speak your thoughts to me. I shall not be offended. What has he said to you about Frederic—and me?"

Lydia resolved to take the plunge. Now was the time to speak plainly to this woman of the thing that was hurting her almost beyond the limits of endurance. Her voice was rather high-pitched. She had the fear that she would not be able to control it.

"I should be blind not to have observed the cruel position in which you are placing Frederic. Is it surprising that your husband has eyes as well as I? What must be his thoughts, Mrs. Brood?"

She expected an outburst, a torrent of indignation, an angry storm of words, and was therefore unprepared for the piteous, hunted expression that came swiftly into the lovely eyes, bent so appealingly upon her own, which were cold and accusing. Here was a new phase to this extraordinary creature's character. She was a coward, after all, and Lydia despised a coward.

The look of scorn deepened in her eyes, and out from her heart rushed all that was soft and tender in her nature, leaving it barren of all compassion.

"I do not want to hurt Frederic," murmured Yvonne. "I—I am sorry if—"

"You are hurting him dreadfully," said Lydia, suddenly choking-up with emotion.

"He is not—not in love with me," declared Yvonne.

"No," said the girl, regaining control of herself, "he is not in love with you. That is the whole trouble. He is in love with me. But—can't you see?"

ELECTION NOTICE

OFFICE OF COUNTY CLERK, March 29, 1915.

TO THE ELECTORS OF ROCK COUNTY:

Notice is hereby given that a judicial county superintendent of schools and member of board of education county election is to be held at the several towns, wards and election precincts in the County of Rock, on the 5th day of April, 1915, at which the officers named below are to be chosen. The name of the candidate for each office under the appropriate designation, each in its proper column.

INFORMATION TO VOTERS

The following instructions are given for the information and guidance of voters: A voter upon entering the polling place, and giving his name and residence, will receive a ballot from the ballot clerk, which must have enclosed thereon the names or initials of both ballot clerks, and no other ballot can be used. Upon receiving his ballot, the voter must retire alone to a booth or compartment, and prepare the same for voting. A ballot clerk may inform the voter as to the proper manner of marking a ballot, but he must not advise or indicate in any manner whom to vote for. If a voter wishes to vote for some of the candidates of different political parties, he should make a cross printed. If he wishes to vote for a person for a certain office, whose name is not on the ballot, he must write the name in the blank space under the printed name of the candidate for the office. In voting for candidates for county judge or superintendent of schools place a cross at the right of the names for whom you wish to vote, but vote for only one. The ballot should not be marked in any other manner.

If the ballot be spoiled it must be returned to the ballot clerk, who must issue another in its stead, but not more than three in all to any one voter. Five minutes' time is allowed in booth to mark ballot. Its official ballots or memorandum to assist the voter in marking his ballot can be taken into the booth and may be used to copy from. The ballot must not be shown so that any person can see how it has been marked by the voter. After it is marked it should be folded so that the inside cannot be seen, but so that the printed endorsements and signatures of the ballot clerks on the outside may be seen. Then the voter should pass out of the booth, or compartment, give his name to the inspector in charge of the ballot box and hand him his ballot to be placed in the box and son of physical disability he is unable to declare to the presiding officer that he is unable to read, or that by remarking the same, to be chosen by the voter, and if he declares that he is totally blind he may be assisted by any person chosen by him from among the legal voters of the county. The presiding officer may administer an oath, in his discretion, as to such person's disability. The party designations and candidates for the different offices are, for example, as follows:

NEED NEW FIGURES ON TAX SITUATION

MILWAUKEE CORRESPONDENT SHOWS DIFFERENCE BE-TWEEN TAXATION AND EXPENDI-TURE.

WHERE WOMEN FAIL

Incident of Superior Police Woman Gives Suffragists Some Food for Thought.

(By Ellis B. Usher.)
Milwaukee, March 27.—In the governor's message, the figures of the tax Commission are given. They indicate the measure of Wisconsin receipts from taxation. If the governor were to make figures to-day, amounting to the total of the figures for 1914 were as follows:
General property tax $41,596,960
Corporation taxes 8,437,906
Income tax 1,560,593
Inheritance tax 468,902

Total $52,444,361
The first item is the amount raised from the tax rolls of every local taxing district of the state. It includes the direct school taxes, of all kinds.
The second item includes all taxes paid by railroads, telegraph, telephone, insurance and other corporations. The third item is the residue of more than $4,000,000 of income taxes after all offsets of personal property taxes have been deducted.
The last item is the inheritance tax.

Some Additional Items.
But the relations of taxation and expenditure need much careful explanation. One item of first importance should be added to the figures given. This is the $4,000,000 that was, as we now learn, omitted from the tax roll, although the money had been anticipated and appropriated by the legislature. This brings the total up to $56,444,361.
The reports of the state treasurer and of the University show that the University has something like $1,800,000 annually from the trust funds and other sources, and something over $1,000,000 from the above general property tax. The Normal Schools have similar income amounting to over $2,000,000, and only $500,000 or so directly from the tax roll. Most of this is a "continuing appropriation." Then there are receipts of $283,353 from charitable and other institutions, and from interest on state deposits and the various state departments aggregating $1,400,000, and some income like the $12,000 or more from the Barber Board, the Medical Board, and others, that never get into the treasury. When an effort is made to cast up the large items most clearly ascertainable, an aggregate of state and local income may easily be added to the above total figure of $56,000,000 or more, bringing the grand total up to more than $62,000,000.
And when to this great sum is added all the United States income and war taxes, and the local license taxes on liquor and other business, that pay tribute to towns, villages, and cities, the aggregate will be added to the $62,000,000. This is at taxation. Every dollar of it falls back, somewhere, on to the general tax paying public. How long can the people stand up under such a load?

Tax Commission's Fallacy.
In its last report the Wisconsin Tax Commission takes the trouble to argue at some length that a "mistaken but mischievous apprehension that taxes depend upon the assessment and that under-assessment means low taxes is being gradually dispelled," but in the language of the "vulgate," that will not wash.
The facts pile mountain high in Wisconsin, to show that the assessment is a cooked book. For example, the grand total of state taxes levied ten years ago, after we had already paid years of La Follette, was as follows:
General property tax $22,986,435
Corporation taxes 2,570,939
Inheritance taxes 125,964

Total $25,683,338
These figures look "small now," but they are also from the Tax Commission's report. Without going into a detailed comparison, it is sufficient to say that all state expenses aggregated $5,566,873 that year. For 1914 the state treasurer's report shows that they aggregated $14,368,876, and it was just indicated that the amount was millions below the actual outlay of the state. The rule here, as everywhere and always, has been that the more money the public raises the more the officials will spend, and that instead of reducing taxation, by creating millions of new taxes, we have only piled up expenditures, and beyond that, municipalities have also greatly increased their indebtedness. Nothing has happened to reduce expenditures.
The virtual quadrupling of corporation taxes has only furnished new funds for new experiments. One way of spending more money has been to make it more difficult to business, until there are over 7000 people on the state pay roll, which means 35,000 or 40,000 people subsisting on public patronage, without counting dependents in our charitable and penal institutions. Our average taxation, of all kinds, in Wisconsin, is something over $1,100, $100 per county, or $32 a head for every man, woman, and child, and $180 for every family of five. There is a lot of fun in it for the tax pay-er. He enjoys it about as well as the feathered goose does being picked alive. These figures are, of course, only approximate. It needs to be hammered into the average Wisconsin man that nobody knows or can, so far, find out, what our actual income or expenses are, in Wisconsin. Beginning with the University, nobody knows what it costs to educate a student there. I will defy an ordinary man to tell from the financial reports, the number of students enrolled. Such lack of business method is not new. I have never known a time when the University's income could be figured out.

It has always been bigger than the state in that respect, and has repeatedly baffled investigation.

A Thought for Suffragists.
A thought for the woman policeman of Superior was held up at the street, at the point of a gun, and robbed of all the money she had with her, and of her police whistle.
The incident is a subject for consideration within a block of the police central station, and Miss Emma Tyler, the victim, was wearing her official badge of authority, the regulation police uniform, and a subject for study, although a man would be jeered off the face of the earth for such an official abasement, and his community would present him with a leather shoe medal. He would be lucky if he were not incontinently "fired." The incident calls to mind the excellent statement by Molly Elliot, Seawall in "The Woman's Revolt," emphasizing the fact that the fact that "no electorate can ever exist which cannot execute its own laws"—"Force," she says, "converts law to government. To create an electorate unable to execute its own force is not, as suffragists seem to think, merely doubling the present electorate. It means pulling out the underpinning which is force, from every form of government, the world over. There is no escape from the predicament of Miss Tyler, or its emphasis upon the argument just quoted, and it will be over-stated to say that the incident is a return to the civilization of Homer and his Amazons, and then we may be forced to recall the exclamation of the King of Persia after the battle of Salamis, "Women fought like men, and men like women." Such extremes do not meet, they exchange places.

South American Finances.
It is of importance to note, in connection with the activities of the commerce and extension work of the University of Wisconsin, which is everywhere and in every form, attention to the Spanish language, that most of the Spanish American countries are financially and com-mercially paralyzed at present. A United States newspaper report from Argentina, published last week, says that failures there for 1914 reached the unprecedented total in liabilities of $182,559,703. Exports decreased over 20% and the total debt was $130,000,000. This is one of South America's most productive countries.
Smaller countries are even worse off. The only direction that this country seems to be getting better connections is with Vladivostok, whence, by the way, 350,000,000 tons of wheat have recently been shipped to England via the Panama Canal.
The American who is looking toward South America for a business outlet, just now, will be disappointed.
It would take years to establish business relations with the South American commerce with the United States, even if there were no demand for our wares because business conditions are so bad.

Baseball War Hurts Game.
Sports writers are talking of the effect of the baseball war on the game. It has taken them a long time either to see or admit that the effect has been a bad one. It was predicted in this journal that the bickering was kept up, fans would soon become disgusted.
As fall passed, it was evident that the game was being hurt. Yet, the made copy. The sport writers continued to play it up.
The hold that baseball has had been due to newspaper publicity and the romance of the game.
Everybody who is talking of the team win. The personnel of the team was a heroic cast. A batter with an average of over .300 was a poor player. The newspapers and people to see the home team will made baseball.
The result of the publicity given to the baseball war has been certain. Fans learned in cold blood that the idea of the home team was a mere man. The "humped" to the Feds for a higher salary. Now the fan knew his idol played ball for money. But it had been part of the deception to think of it not as of a mere salary, but as a reward due the player's natural ability. A glamour was thus built up around baseball which mercenary publicity, having erected, now interested at a downfall. This is analytical, but it is true.
The question is, why didn't the sport writers see it last summer? Were they too, under the spell? Have they learned from their own bickering about their ears? Or didn't they care? At any rate, newspaper reporters and baseball magnates together stand against the fan. The fan they may be wrong. This summer will prove their fears not unfounded.

Erle Prospects.
(Advertisement.)
The Wall Street Journal of the 20th has an interesting article on the present conditions and prospects of the Erie Railroad that is worth a quotation or two here. It says, for example:
"The management has spent less than the average on maintenance of way and structures, due perhaps to the cessation of heavy improvement work, but expenditures for repairs to equipment have in January and February, 1914. This is an indication that Erle is keeping its plant in shape to meet the demands of increased business, so far as it may develop."
"The company, however, appears to have started its new fiscal year auspiciously. January was a most encouraging month. February, according to officials, showed still better gains over last year's results.
The improvement in January and month's gross was $350,000 and for the two and a half months to March the gain over the same period of last year was about $550,000. Net revenues after expenses and taxes for the period Jan. 1 to March 1 increased $900,000 over the same period in 1914, a gain of over 120%."

Orfordville News

Orfordville, March 26.—Misses Hattie and Mabel Jacobson were Janesville party on Thursday.
W. J. Cleveland, who for the past few years has been making his home at Evansville, has moved to the village and will occupy his father's house, just outside the village limits, near the cemetery.
Miss Gertrude Hemmingsway of Hanover is spending a few days in the village, the guest of friends.
Several from Orfordville attended a business conference at a club here at Broadhead on Friday. They report a most excellent time. Mrs. Kearney, who is an invalid, enjoyed the occasion immensely.
Mrs. C. Sherman and Mrs. H. H. H. H. head of Broadhead visited in Orford-ville on Thursday. They were guests at the home of the ladies' sister, Mrs.
George Paukhus.
Friday evening was fairly well attended and well spoken of.

Mrs. Sarah Hammett, who has been ill for some days with diphtheria, at the home of her father, the town of Spring Valley, is reported as somewhat improved, and her friends are very hopeful of her recovery.
The men's supper at the opera house on Thursday evening was well attended and was generally considered to be a great success. The culinary art which was accorded to the men was fully up to the standard, while the group of young men who served acquired themselves in fine style. The proceeds were between forty and fifty dollars.

CLINTON

Clinton, March 26.—Rev. M. L. Gilbert, Lutheran church, has pur-ing her absence.

Eugene Foley and wife will move to the house known as the "Sumner" place, near the creamery, and G. R.
Crawford will move to the house vacated by Mr. Foley.
Mrs. O. W. Collier was in Janesville yesterday.
Baby Robert Simmons is quite ill.
Miss Marion Vedder fell on the cement walk while skating Wednesday and cut her lip badly.

MAGNOLIA

Magnolia, March 26.—Mr. and Mrs.
C. H. H. H. took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Clifford on Friday Tuesday, and attended the Helpers' Union there.
Mrs. Fred Wood visited Janesville yesterday.
Will Martin and family are moving to Evansville today, and the same team will haul Will Crawford's household goods here. Mr. Martin will work in the Evansville creamery and Mr. Crawford will have charge of the creamery at this place and will be assisted by Ernest Poste. We are sorry to have Mr. Martin move away, but will welcome Mr. Crawford and family into our community.
Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Harper and son Merritt spent Thursday at the former's parental home.

On Tuesday evening a large number of friends and neighbors gathered at the hall at a farewell party given for Mr. and Mrs. Will Martin and daughter. During the evening refreshments were served and Mr. and Mrs. Martin were presented with a set of silver spoons and purse of money.

JAPS PRESENT PETITION FOR THE PURCHASE OF THE PHILIPPINE ISLES.
(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Tokyo, March 26.—The purchase of the Philippine Islands from the United States is suggested in a petition recently presented to Count Okuma, the prime minister, by Shi-gema Sugiyama and a number of other Japanese who have been prominent in politics. Mr. Sugiyama was formerly secretary to Prince Katsura.
The petition sets forth that in view of opinion for the United States that the Philippines should be given up by that country the lands should be acquired by Japan as the best means of solving the Pacific question.
The signers point out that disagreements between Japan and the United States arise over the question of immigration. If Japan acquired the Philippines there would be no fornia.

GYPSES CONTENTED WITHOUT FIGHTING

Only Race in Europe Today Not Engaged in Conflict is A Peculiar One—Geographic Society Bulletin.

"Europe has still today one utterly peaceful people, a people peaceful in action, in intent, and of peaceful contemplation," says a bulletin just issued by the National Geographic Society at Washington. "According to press dispatches, this race is the only such race, but, then, it is one of the most peculiar peoples in the world's history on the pyramids."
"Entering into the life of all nations under the sun, yet a part of no single one; mingling themselves within the highest civilizations, yet unlettered; permeating an eternal wander-path yet forever true to the ties of racial blood and to customs whose origin and significance have been fully forgotten, the gypsy is the most mysterious of all the strange elements of folkdom."
"Wherever they came have never been settled to a certainty. All manner of fables have been spun to explain their origin. Since they first appeared upon the stage of Europe in the Middle Ages, they have been identified with the Lost Tribes of Israel, the 'mixed multitude' that followed Moses out of Egypt, the Canaanites, the Amorites, the Saracens and the Egyptians. Some have held them to be the children of Cain, and others have decided that they were the children of the Wandering Jew and inheritors of the restless curse of their father."

"They themselves, however, have never professed to know where they were or where they came from, but they have shown great readiness to accept the conclusions on this subject of the people among whom they lived. It was not until the growth of comparative philology and the chance investigation of the gypsy tongue in the beginning of the last century that scientists concluded the gypsies to be a wandering caste from tribe from Northern India. Their language nearly resembles Sanscrit, the foundation tongue of all our modern languages which has held its place in Indian sources."
"This language, then, was wonderfully preserved in the face of overmastering cultures and eternal wandering. This has not been accomplished by a literature or by a close correlation, and their language is an unwritten one, while they, themselves, are scattered in small bands everywhere over the face of the earth.
The gypsy calls widely than the remedies of any other people. He is a 'man of all men,' his folk-life is 'romani' and his language is 'romani.' Everyone not of his race came under the generic term of 'gentile.'"

"Gypsy-folk present the strangest problems known to philology and ethnography. An elementary, nomadic folk persisting for centuries in the face of complex civilizations, they have retained their physical characteristics, their tribal rules, and their traditions reminiscent of their far-distant, extra European past, their highly inflected language, and their thousand years of type or type. They are absolutely singular and without close parallel among the peoples of earth."
"Gypsy-religion and gypsy-aspiration may be summed up in two lines from the works of the German poet, Goethe:
'To give room for wandering is it
That the world was made so'

PORTER

Porter, March 25.—One of the prettiest of weddings was held at the spacious farm home of Mr. and Mrs.
Wheeler on Wednesday evening, March 24, when the only daughter, Blanche Lillian Wheeler, became the bride of Arthur B. Greene, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Green of the lower end of Porter. Promptly at eight o'clock the "O Promise Me" superelily sung by the bride's cousin, Mr.
Bishop, was taken up by the melodious strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Emma Bates, announced that the evening hour had arrived. The bride, beautifully arrayed in white crepe de chien over white silk with pearl trimmings and carrying white roses, accompanied by her cousin, Miss Edith Taylor, as maid of honor, arrayed in yellow satin and carrying yellow roses, were a vision of loveliness. The groom wore the conventional black and was assisted by his brother Harold. Little Margaret Boss sweetly took the part of ring-bearer, while the Rev. Mr. North of Delavan spoke the solemn words that united the happy couple beneath a canopy of evergreens, flowers, and a background of potted plants. Mrs.
Bishop then sang "I Love You Truly" in her powerful soprano voice, after which congratulations followed, which were indeed sincere, as both Mr. and Mrs. Green have grown to manhood and womanhood in our midst and are as exemplary young couple. The rooms were beautifully decorated, the color scheme of the dining room being orange and white. Supper, which consisted of an elegant three course menu, under the proficient management of Mrs. Fish of Janesville, as caterer, was served by six young ladies to one hundred and twenty guests, who did ample justice to it. During the evening the happy couple left on a short wedding trip, after which they will be at home to their many friends on a farm here. A number of beautiful gifts were left as slight tokens of esteem. Some of the guests from a distance were: Mrs. S. Gammon of Milwaukee, Miss McKean of Chicago, Mrs. Bishop of Michigan, Mr. and Mrs. Schackleton of Beloit, Johnson Taylor
Mr. and Mrs. Willis Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. W. Taylor and family, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Fish of Janesville; Mrs.

John White of Beloit; Mr. and Mrs.
B. Farrago, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brown of Madison, and Rev. Mr. North of Delavan.

JOHNSTOWN

Johnstown, March 26.—Death came Friday morning, March 19, to Morgan Edwin Utley at his home in Delavan, after a lingering illness. The deceased was born July 9, 1829, in Cayuga county, New York. He came to Wisconsin in 1848 and in 1854 was married to Isabelle Cameron, who passed away Sept. 9, 1886. From this union four children survive. Mrs. Emma Biederson of Drain, Oregon; Horace, Abbie and Willard of Delavan. On Dec. 25, 1868, Mr. Utley was married to Caroline Hatch. Five children survive this marriage. Mrs. Lillian Lerch of Johnstown, Charles of Winnipeg, Canada; William of Delavan, Mrs. Edith Thorne of Tulare, California, Mrs. Elvaine Wheeler of Drain, Oregon. Mrs. Utley passed away Dec.
31, 1910. Services were held from the home in Delavan Sunday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Yard. Interment in the family lot at Richmond.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Schmaling were Sunday guests at the Genter home.
Hallie Peterson of East Troy spent a few days with the home folks.
The Five Hundred club entertained
Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs.
James Haight at a six o'clock dinner, and the evening was one round of pleasure.
Mr. and Mrs. George Butts of Janesville were at the fair Friday and called on their daughter, Mrs. Theodore Rye.

CASCARETS FOR YOUR BOWELS IF HEADACHY, SICK

TO-NIGHT! CLEAN YOUR BOWELS AND END HEADACHES, COLDS, SOUR STOMACH.

Get a 10-cent box.
Put aside—just once—the Salts, Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters which merely force a passageway through the bowels, but do not thoroughly cleanse, freshen and purify these drainage organs, and have no effect whatever upon the liver and stomach.
Keep your "insides" pure and fresh with Cascarets, which thoroughly cleanse the stomach, remove the undigested, sour food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the congested waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will make you feel fresh by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken, and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Bloating, Severe Colds, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated Bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

O'Neill of Emerald Grove were present at the farewell reception given in their honor at the home of Mr. and Mrs.

The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion with various good luck emblems and cards decorated with four leafed clover were passed and each guest requested to write some verse or line wishing Rev. and Mrs. O'Neill good luck in their new home and wishing the health of the members and friends of the La Prairie Sunday school Robert Conway presented them with a set of solid silver knives, forks and spoons as a token during the past summer.
A musical program and contest for young and old was enjoyed by all present. Refreshments of sandwiches, cake, ice cream and coffee were served, after which the guests departed, after having spent a most enjoyable evening.

& RUTH CAMERON

GIVING THE SHOPS A SQUARE DEAL.
It was the fog end of the winter season, the time of wind and mud and rain, the time of winter-sickness and spring-longings, and most important of all, the time of bargains.

The lady who always knows somehow had bought herself a pair of shoes. We admired their fine points and then the Author's wife put the question that was in our minds, "Were they a bargain?"

"Yes, I think so," said the lady. "Four dollars."

"Marked from what?"

"From five."

"You don't call that a bargain, do you?" she asked. "You ought to see some of the bargains I've seen last few weeks. Perfectly wonderful."

"Yes, I know," said the lady, "but the ones that were marked way down didn't fit me or were at all what I needed. I thought it was better to save a dollar on something I wanted than two on something I didn't want. It's twenty per cent. if I could save that much on a year's clothes buying it would be about forty dollars. Surely that's worth saving."

Molly, the little stenographer lady, had been listening to the discussion with an air of repressing with difficulty something she wanted to say. It friend, Mrs. Martin, who bought the two pairs of five dollar shoes for two dollars and a quarter a pair, she questioned the Author's wife.

"That's what I call a bargain!"

Molly's eyes danced. "Well, I met her on the trolley yesterday, and she happened to speak of bargains and she told me she had to give one pair of four dollar shoes and a half which is a half a dollar more than the lady paid."

"Well, they were very fine shoes," declared the Author's wife times. "Twenty per cent on something you want or fifty per cent on something you don't want. Which is the better bargain? I put it up to you, reader."

Every Woman's Duty to Follow the Advertisements.
I am a great believer in following all the sales in the newspaper advertisements and buying at advantage whenever possible. I think that it is foolish for women to eat it into their heads that nothing but an enormous reduction is worth while. One sometimes hears the department stores accused of exaggerating values in their advertising. If this is some time who has driven them to this policy? The women who absolutely demand sensational values as the price of their trade.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLK

MOTHER McGREW AND HER FAMILY.

To her family one day old Mother McGrew:
"I'm going to a big party for you try;
And you children can help me a lot if you try;
The party will be on the Fourth of July."

"So you'd better behave until then or you'll find At the very last minute I may change my mind."
The children all promised because, it is true,
They doted on parties as all children do.

In the meantime good Mother McGrew baked and brewed;
She fried and she frizzled; she baked and she stewed;
So when the day came she had as a treat
All sorts of delectable goodies to eat.

She bought roman candles of red, white and blue;
She bought some pin-wheels and sky-rockets, too;
And so when the little folks got there that night
And saw all these things they were wild with delight.

As they sat down to supper good Mother McGrew Said, "We will have fireworks as soon as you're through."
But alas for her plans, when they looked on the sky,
They found all their beautiful fireworks were done.

The children all started to weep and to wail;
Then Mother McGrew said the ostrich turn pale;
She knew in a minute just what he had done;
He'd eaten the fireworks up, every last one!

"Though I really should shake you, I'll scold you instead;
For a shaking might set off the fireworks," she said.
"In fact, I don't know just what I ought to do;
In a case of this kind," said poor Mother McGrew.

"But this much I know, it's distressingly plain You'll never be asked to a party again."
And I think that her word must have proved to be true,
For I've never seen him at any, have you?

Household Hint

SIMPLE HOME REMEDIES.

A severe coughing paroxysm can be relieved by taking a teaspoon of glycerin in a swallow of hot milk.

Salt Bath—Very beneficial and useful. Purchase of druggist a box of sea salt; dissolve about a fourth of it in hot water. Saturate a bath towel in the salt water, then let it dry. After the regular bath, rub the body with the salted towel, or use it mornings after the cold bath.

To Prevent Sneezing—If you want to keep from sneezing, press the finger on the upper part of the nose, or rub the forehead just above the nose.

A bag of hot sand with a tablespoon of vinegar sprinkled on will relieve neuralgia.

OMELET RECIPE.

To four teaspoons of cornstarch add one-half teaspoon of baking powder. Rub smooth with one tablespoon of cold milk. Add the beaten yolks of four eggs and eleven tablespoons milk. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of four eggs and turn into heated skillet or omelet pan in which one tablespoon of butter has been melted. Cover and cook over flame till brown, then set in moderate oven a few moments.

An omelet made with milk browns better and is more nutritious than one made with water.

"EXCUSES" FOR MAPLE SYRUP.
Delicious French Toast With One Egg—Beat egg in small bowl, or teaspoon add pinch of salt and tablespoon of flour. In another bowl place one-half cup sour milk (more if wished) and add one-half teaspoon soda. Add this to egg mixture. Dip slices of bread in batter, fry in hot greased pan and serve with maple syrup.

Apple Fritters—One pint sweet milk, one pint flour, two eggs, one teaspoon baking powder, half teaspoon salt, six medium-sized apples chopped fine. Beat all thoroughly together, dip one tablespoon at a time into hot lard, fry a deep brown. Serve with maple syrup. (One-half of this can be made and will serve four people.)

Waffles—One heaping cup flour, three teaspoons baking powder, half teaspoon salt, one cup sweet milk, yolks of two eggs, whites of two eggs, two tablespoons melted butter. Mix and sift dry ingredients, add milk gradually, yolks of eggs well beaten, butter and whites of eggs beaten stiff. Cook on greased hot waffle iron. Serve with maple syrup.

NOVEL USES OF LETTUCE.

I know you are wondering why I don't break my engagement at once. It would be a terrible thing to do after this boy has lived and worked for me all this time. He is so different from other men that I am afraid the disappointment of losing him would change the course of his life. What can I do? I so want to do the right thing.

You would make a miserable failure of married life if you entered into it feeling as you do now. Straighten things at

THE MASTODON IN WISCONSIN.
No. 6.
Prepared for the Gazette by the Geology department at The University of Wisconsin.

Perhaps most peculiar of all the emigrants to Wisconsin in the Ice Age were the elephant-like creatures that we call the mastodons and mammoths. Some years ago a wonderful skeleton was unearthed in Richland county, Wisconsin. It is the remains of an enormous mastodon, and so nicely are the bones preserved that the geologists can not only tell what the fellow looked like in life, but also something of his habits, and even the manner in which he met his death. He was a monster nearly eleven feet high, and weighed several tons. He must have had a voracious appetite to feed such a bulk, for his food was not so nourishing as that upon which the horses and cattle of today live. His teeth show that his chief articles of diet consisted of conifer sprouts and twigs of trees. A single tooth of this fellow was several

CAN'T FIND DANDRUFF

Every bit of dandruff disappears after one or two applications of Danderine rubbed well into the scalp with the finger tips. Get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store and save your hair. After a few applications you can't find a particle of dandruff or any falling hair, and the scalp will never itch.

As salad its uses are almost endless. An excellent salad is made by making a nest of hearts of lettuce. To one cup of cream cottage cheese, add one tablespoon of chopped celery, one teaspoon of chopped celery, onion, parsley and chives and chop roughly, make into balls and arrange in the lettuce nests and serve with mayonnaise.

SICK ROOM HINT.
A tiny piece of camphor gum will burn for a long time and makes a novel and pleasing light for a sick room. Place it in a saucer of water where it will float, then touch a match to it. It will burn slowly, emitting a faint, pleasant odor.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Neil, don't you want to go over to the Ellisons?" asked Dick one bright moonlight night. "We've got to keep friendly with her on the doctor's account."

"If I must return that call, by all means let me do it, under convoy, I don't feel equal to facing her alone."

"I intend to bring up the subject of the walking with M. I. S. and all my wifely ways," continued Dick eagerly.

"I really think it would be easier to stop weeping with her than to try to convert the gossiping power on your way of thinking," asked Neil persuasively.

"No," said Dick decidedly, "there isn't anything that makes me more determined to continue my innocent courtesies to that girl than the knowledge that those old cats are sulking over the affair and putting a malicious interpretation on everything."

"You forget, Dick, that you have more than yourself to consider."

"Look here, Neil, do you mean to say you are such a pigmy soul that you are not willing to have me go and come with that girl in broad daylight when it would necessitate no five rudeness to her to avoid it?"

Dick laid his hands on Neil's shoulders and looked earnestly in her face. "Has that woman made you distrust me, dear?"

"Of course not," said Neil, looking down, but it is not pleasant to have such women pitying me and blaming me."

you, and no one has a right to drag a girl's name into gossip that might hurt her reputation in order to show defiance to a village code." Neil looked earnestly into his eyes.

"She doesn't care for their tale chatter," she said so, so that's all right."

"No, I think you should care for her reputation all the more in that case," Neil was using this chance to say all that was in her heart, hoping in this way to end the gossip and her own uneasiness.

"I guess you are speaking one word for another," said Neil. "Dick dropped his hands and he said and turned away. 'If you really are disturbed by so simple a thing as that I am disappointed in you; that's all. I will tell Miss Rudolph that you are afraid to have me with her and we will have to discontinue our walks back and forth from meals.'"

"Dick! Neil's voice was full of deep emotion. He turned and looked at her.

"We have had one quarrel over that girl. Let us understand each other. I do not want you to do one thing to please me that is irksome to you, or to do one thing to please me that is irksome to you."

I suggested that you do nothing to cause trouble, for I really thought that was the simplest solution of the problem. If you do not think so, I am free to do as you please. You shall never trouble you again."

"Of course, I never really thought you cared about such a trifle and I hope you will learn to care as little for those shallow pates whose only pleasure is to watch other people and put the worst construction on all they say and do. I mean to do what my best judgment tells me is right and I will tell them so hang."

Dick laid his hands on Neil's shoulders and looked earnestly in her face. "Come, get your things on; it is nearly eight o'clock."

"Let's stop and ask the Parsons to go with us. In so goodly a company I shall feel safe from the darts of the enemy," said Neil, phoning on her hat.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will you please give suggestions for an April Fool party of about eight couples?

When you send your invitations, if you ask each person to come, please to do a sleight-of-hand trick, the evening's entertainment is at least half arranged. Transparent though of course new ones are not acceptable. Arrangements should be made for the table for the conjurors, and chairs for the audience. If you have two rooms with folding doors or portieres between, this will be best place for the games. A box of April-fool candy, a "Jack-in-the-box" or other toy, may be given as a prize for the best trick.

At supper surprises may be very apropos. Any housekeeper will think of things in the way of eatables which are not what they seem to be, but should also fall ice cream in surprising colors and shapes may be served. A prize should be given at the end of the evening to the person who has been the most successful in fooling the evening long also to the one who has successfully fooled the greatest number of persons.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I would like to give a birthday party for a girl friend of mine who will be seventeen the second of April. We have a large hall in which I am going to give it. Would you advise me to have it the second of April or wait until after Lent?

(2) I intend to have about forty guests, both boys and girls. All the people coming dance. Would you advise me to have dancing, therefore, or games? Will you suggest some good games and also something to serve for lunch?

(3) I intend to use correspondence cards for invitations. Will they be all right? — LONESOME MOLLY.

(1) I would advise you to have it the second of April as long as the girl's birthday is then.

(2) I would advise you to have dancing. And perhaps cards at the end of the hall for those who are tired of dancing. Serve punch and little cakes. (3) Yes.

The Ladies of Janesville Enhance their Personal Charm
By the Use of

Newbro's Herpicide

It is a significant fact that the people of Janesville use more Newbro's Herpicide than any equal number of people elsewhere.

Desiring always to appear at their best the ladies of Janesville have been quick to recognize the great excellence of Newbro's Herpicide as they know that its intelligent use will add more to the beauty of their hair than anything else. They are justly proud of the redness and luster of their tresses made beautiful by their hair growing on their own heads that the Janesville Ladies add so much to their personal appearance.

Fifteen years ago Newbro's Herpicide was the only germ remedy for dandruff in America. At that time, both the remedy and the theory were ridiculed. But since then Herpicide has achieved an almost marvelous success and the story of its astonishing merit has penetrated to every corner of the globe.

Now the Herpicide claims and Herpicide advertising have been freely copied by the manufacturers of other scalp remedies. Hence, during this change of front the remedies themselves have not been changed, simply the claims for them. Here is the point. Why should you experiment with something claimed to be as good as Herpicide when genuine Herpicide, the Original Germ-Remedy, may be purchased in every drug and department store in Janesville.

The "just as good" kind is good for the substitutes cash register but is not good for your scalp. Application of real Herpicide can be obtained at any good barber shop. Sold and guaranteed at all toilet goods counters. A trial bottle 10 Cents. A booklet FREE—send for both to the Herpicide Co. Dept.—102 B Detroit, Mich.

sank down exhausted, and was quickly smothered in the slime. And so his carcass lay for thousands of years, the flesh slowly decaying the bones but little altered. Then a stream cut its way across the marsh and gradually dug its channel into the mud at the bottom. After an exceptional flood this little stream in Richland county partly uncovered the bones and again brought the mastodon to light.

Today this specimen is to be seen at the University of Wisconsin in the geology museum. Some of the bones were missing, but these were readily restored from plaster. The students in the department worked hard making and patching together bones and drilling them for bolts. Now they have this monarch's remains bolted to an iron framework in the defiant attitude he held in life.

(The remains of the ancient lakes of Wisconsin will be described in this column Monday.—Editor.)

HOW TEUTONS FEED THE WAR PRISONERS

Seven Hundred Thousand Prisoners Are a Most Serious Problem for the German Government.

(Correspondence Associated Press.)
Berlin, March 27.—How to take care of the hordes of prisoners of war captured by the German armies is a problem which is becoming a most serious one for the German government. It is estimated that the list of prisoners, including those captured in Poland, is now over 700,000 men. This involves an expense for the mere feeding of the prisoners of about $100,000 a day. In every available way the men are being put to work—on farms, on the roads, in iron works and coal mines, and in clearing and reclaiming vast areas of marsh and moor land, principally in the eastern part of the empire.

Experience thus far has convinced the Germans that the Russians are far more available for this manual labor than the English or French, none of the latter of whom lend themselves easily to the hard work to which the Russian peasants seemed accustomed.

One of the most important pieces of work on which the Russians are being employed in ever large numbers is the reclamation of nearly 7,000,000 hectares of unfruitful, waste land along the Loba River, from Lauberg to the Saba Sea, adjacent to the Bay of Danzig.

Plans to accomplish this task date as far as the time of Frederick the Great, but to the present have never progressed further than the partial straightening of the river bed. At the time of the outbreak of war some 60 hectares had been reclaimed by the force of 3,000 men, who stopped work when the fighting started.

Already 3,000 Russians in two camps are at work draining the land and instituting improvements that include irrigation, plowing and planting of meadows. Through these prisoners and others who were added to the ranks it is expected that the work so long delayed will be finished in record time.

Thousands of the soldiers captured in the recent Hindenburg victory were put to work at once clearing the roads of snow and mud, and so great was the number employed that within a short time the highways were passable everywhere in the rear of the German army.

The German authorities likewise are rapidly making coal miners out of the Russian prisoners, and by this means are restoring the mines in upper Silesia, Posen and other districts to their normal productivity. The prisoners also are being utilized in iron works and stone quarries. There are only a few who are put to work in such places, however, when they do not compete with free labor.

There are already a large number of prisoners in the lignite mines near Bitterfeld, and others are at work constructing new chaucuses principally in the east. Others are busy on road repair work.

In the west of Germany where the French and English prisoners are in predominance various plans are being made for using the men in agricultural pursuits so that crops may be planted, cared for and harvested at the earliest possible time.

CARDINALS AT BIG CATHOLIC CELEBRATION.

(Special to the Gazette.)
Washington, March 27.—The twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of the Catholic University of America was celebrated at St. Patrick's Catholic Church here today with the three American Cardinals—Gibbons, Farley and O'Connell—in attendance. It was the first occasion on which the three princes of the church in the United States have officiated simultaneously in a religious ceremony.

Cardinal Farley of New York celebrated the Pontifical Mass. Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore, chancellor of the university, preached the sermon. Cardinal Farley of Boston delivered the opening discourse at 3 o'clock. Archbishop Benzon, papal delegate, concluded the academic exercises with the benediction.

Cardinal Gibbons presided at the academic exercises, when honorary degrees were conferred on prominent Catholic laymen. President C. Stanley Hall of Clark University, Worcester, Mass., represented the Association of American Universities while the new John Cavanaugh president of Notre Dame University, made an address on Catholic institutions of learning.

The Catholic University opened its doors November 13, 1863 with four professors, and the theological students. Today, the teaching staff numbers 80 and more than 1,800 students are enrolled. There was one opening edifice at the time of the opening. Today there are seven, the newer ones being McManis Hall, Gibbons Memorial Hall, Gradual Hall and the Martin Maloney Chemical Laboratory.

BLAME POOR QUARANTINE LAWS FOR SCARLET FEVER EPIDEMIC IN MILWAUKEE.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 27.—Health Commissioner Rubin blames the inadequacy of the state quarantine laws for the prevalence of scarlet fever in this city. There are more cases of that disease here than of all other communicable diseases combined.

Wisconsin requires but three weeks' quarantine for scarlet fever. Chicago and New York require five weeks, while some places in Europe demand six weeks. There are at present 60 cases of scarlet fever in the city, 22 of diphtheria, nine of typhoid and six of smallpox. This record is unusually good, with the exception of scarlet fever.

GRAHAM McLAY RETURNS FROM EXTENDED WESTERN TRIP TO THE EXPOSITIONS.

Graham McLAY of the town of Rock Prairie has returned from an extended trip of eleven weeks through western states, during which time he visited Los Angeles, San Francisco, the San Diego and San Francisco expositions, and points in Nebraska and other states.

He left Janesville on January tenth. He has much to say of the fine buildings and scenery at the world's fair, and also comments very favorably on the San Diego exposition. Miniature railways, "jitney" busses and auto trains carry the spectators about the grounds, owing to the large space of ground taken up by the buildings.

GREAT SARA BRIDGE OPENED TO TRAFFIC ON THE GANGES RIVER.

Calcutta, March 27.—The great Sara bridge, on the Ganges River, has been opened to traffic, thus inaugurating a new era in passenger communication across the river. The bridge is the largest ever constructed by British engineers, with the possible exception of the Forth bridge in Scotland. The work was begun in 1908. The structure has a total length of 5,900 feet, and consists of fifteen main spans and six land spans. The cost is nearly $16,000,000.

INSECT PEST DANGER EXPERIENCED IN ARMY

German Railway Cars Returning From Russian Front Must Be Thoroughly Disinfected.

Berlin, March 27.—German railway cars returning from the front in Russia according to an order of the railway authorities, must now be disinfected with the following inscription: "From Russia—Epidemic Danger—Before reloading must be disinfected." The regulation further prohibits the use of upholstered cars in Russian Poland so far as possible owing to the difficulties of disinfecting them.

The insect pest is described as a real danger to the German troops, for the parasites, as has been discovered, carry spotted fever from man to man. Not a few German soldiers have succumbed to it there. Soldiers' letters are accordingly apportioned for insect powders and other protective preparations. Great numbers have been so flooded with these that the postoffice has had to issue orders excluding all mercury preparations from the mails.

Fortunately the soldiers are able to see the humorous side of the matter, as is shown by the names that they have adopted for the different classes of insects. Some are called "infantry" others "cavalry." Still another name for the latter is the "black hussars." The Cologne Gazette soberly suggests that the word for the practice of the Arabs, that of keeping their heads shaven, "in order to leave no room for quarantining foreign visitors."

HONOR DEAN BIRGE WITH GREAT DINNER

Will Mark Completion of Forty Years of Service of Dean Edward A.
Birge at University.

(Special to the Gazette.)
Madison, Wis., March 27.—A great dinner for Dean Edward A. Birge of the college of letters and science of the University of Wisconsin will be held here tonight. The dinner will mark the completion by Dean Birge of forty years' service in the university. Covers will be laid for two hundred. Prominent alumni from Chicago and Milwaukee and other cities of the state will be present. Members of the board of regents, the board of visitors and other officials connected with the university will attend.

Among the speakers will be President Charles Van Hise for President T. C. Chamberlain, Prof. J. Jastrow for the faculty of the college of letters and science, and Prof. Howard L. Smith, of the other colleges of the university. Dr. A. J. Ochsenr of Chicago, the famous surgeon, is expected to represent the alumni. Dean Birge will also make an address.

Dean Birge has taken a large part in the development of the university. He came to it as instructor in natural history in 1876, and became dean of the college of letters and science in 1891. From 1900 to 1903 he was its president. He is director of the geological and natural history survey of the state, a member of the state board of geology, and of the state conservation commission. He has been awarded many honors for his work in zoology and as a college dean.

THIRTY-SIX VARIETIES OF MARBLE IN CAPITOL BUILDING AT MADISON.

(Special to the Gazette.)
Madison, Wis., March 27.—There are 36 varieties of marble in the new capitol. They come from Europe, Africa and America. Although Wisconsin is not represented, this state alone furnished the granite used in the interior of the building. The native granite is beautifully colored and is said to be the hardest and most durable stone known. The piers in the grand staircase, halls and pilasters around the rotunda are of green granite, found in Marathon county. Above these piers is a band of Waupaca red granite. The columns at the entrance to the legislative bobbies are Wausau red granite. The 18 piers which support a circular gallery or the rotunda are of Berlin rhyolite, found in Green Lake county. Other granites used are Abolstone grey, from Marinette county; Pike River red, also from Marinette county; and Montello from Marquette county.

The marbles come from Minnesota, Missouri, Tennessee, Maryland, Vermont, France, Italy, Germany and Algiers.

Berlin, March 27.—The first Belgian flag to be brought to Berlin and added to the collection of trophies of war now in the "Zeughaus" or military museum has just arrived. The banner is of black, yellow and red colored silk, with a gold fringe. The staff is surmounted by a lion with the inscription "XIII Foris." With the Belgian flag arrived two French banners, one bearing the regiment number "850" and the other the letters "J" surrounded by a laurel wreath. In the center are the names of famous battles, including Sabastopol.

CHILDREN'S WEEKLY STORY

(By Paul Holmes)

In a moody frame of mind, Winsor Thorngate walked up the shady street, now filling with people coming, as Winsor was, from church. He walked from side to side of the walk, kicking viciously at every tree he passed, from which it was evident that the boy was troubled about something. And well he might be, for the superintendent of the Sunday School had announced that the annual Children's Day celebration would be held the following Sunday, and that all of the members of Miss Kenton's class would give recitations. Then he had given Winsor a paper clipping containing three stanzas of poetry.

Now, to some boys, speaking in public is easy, but not to Winsor. He would rather do almost anything than endure the gaze of an audience. He hated speaking with all the hate there was in him.

And so Winsor shuffled up the street.

Thorpugus fugit. In what seemed to Winsor to be all too short a time, the world turned around seven times and the day of the ordeal was at hand. The boy had had his bath, had been forcibly put inside of a starched blouse, and was waiting for his parents to appear for him, were going to go and watch him distinguish himself. As he stood there, he mentally went over the lines of his piece.

"O we are happy children gay,
And we are happy here to-day."

"But others, who are far away—Darn!" This exclamation cut short the recital. O, the untruth of it! The boy almost ashamed to be forced to recite it. If there was only some way out! Couldn't he run away? Winsor well knew that he would receive a severe flogging if he did so. And yet—"Come, Winsor, what's your mother, who has just opened the door. 'We are ready now. Are you sure you know your piece well enough? If you should break down, I would be so mortified that I don't believe I would ever allow you to speak in public again.'"

"Guess I'll break down, then," thought Winsor to himself, but he kept a discreet silence.

In a few moments they were joined by Mr. Thorngate and they were ready to depart. To Winsor, hope was now lost. He was doomed. As he ascended the steps, an auto drew up before the house and stopped.

"Why, it's Henry and Mame," cried Mrs. Thorngate in delight. "Hello, Henry! Good morning, Mrs. Williams! We are just starting for church. It's Children's Day, you know, and Winsor is going to speak. We would be so glad to have you come with us. Just put the car in the garage and come along."

This was too much for Winsor. It was bad enough for the people of the village to see him disgrace himself by Uncle Henry—
"I'm going on ahead, mamma," he called, "I'm afraid I'll be late." And in a moment he was racing down the street. He had resolved to run away to the woods and remain there until it was all over. But fate decreed otherwise. He had hardly turned the corner when he ran into Mr. Heatherly, the minister.

"How do you do, Winsor," he was greeted. "You are going to church now, I presume. Well so am I, and now I presume we'll go together. How are you coming with your recitation?"

Winsor's spirits drooped to zero. "All right," he replied, lifelessly. What could he do now? Everything seemed against him. Every way he turned he met an obstacle. Now he would have to be at the church. His father would be there. Like a flash came the idea. An idea which promised to work out better than his previous plan. And his very soul was singing as they entered the church. He did not take his usual seat, but sat in the middle of a crowded pew where he was practically invisible to anyone a few seats away.

"Why, where did Winsor go?" was an exclamation of surprise, which escaped Mrs. Thorngate.

"He just remarked that he was going on ahead," volunteered Henry Williams.

"O dear!" she cried.

"Winsor's the matter?" inquired her husband.

But if Mrs. Thorngate suspected anything wrong, she gave no further evidence of it. However, as they slowly walked down the street, she was conscious of a vague feeling of uneasiness. This was not allayed by her first glimpse of the congregation. Nowhere was Winsor visible.

"John," she whispered to her husband, "I wish you would go outside and see if you can find Winsor. I'm afraid—"

"What! You can't think that—" "I don't know what to think," she answered, "but he isn't here."

"If he has—" the man cried, "and with Henry and Mame here, too." The accent boded no good for the boy. Mr. Thorngate rose and went in search of his son.

The program began. The minister gave a talk. A little girl sang. Harold Brown, a friend of Winsor, stumbled through some poetry. Mrs. Thorngate well knew who was next.

At that moment, the door opened and Mr. Thorngate appeared on the threshold. His hair was mussed up, and beads of perspiration were running down his face. His wife looked appealingly at him, but he shook his head. The quest had been fruitless.

"The next thing on the program will be 'The Happy Children Day' by Winsor Thorngate," read the minister.

You can imagine his mother's surprise at seeing the boy in question arise from a pew, and calmly proceed to the stage. A great look of relief came over her. He was here after all, she murmured in bewilderment.

Winsor's face was a study as he approached the platform. In it was visible a martial determination and an expression of dread. There was a tense silence as he mounted the steps and faced the crowd. Then he spoke, in a hurried and frightened voice.

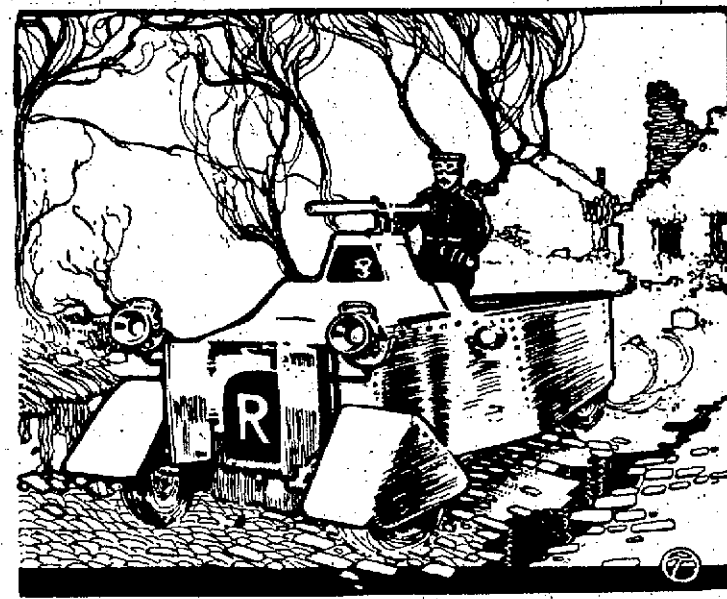

"O, we aren't little children gay,
We just hate to be here today.
We envy those who far away
Them stanzas, but his poetical ability had limited the parody to one. There was a hush, and then a mighty shout. Mr. Thorngate rushed forward.

There is no need to describe the scene that followed. After severe punishment had been meted out, Winsor was saying, "Mamma, do you remember what you said about how you wouldn't let me speak in public again if I didn't do well?" "You rest easy. No one will ever ask you."

"Landlady,"

The distinction which the possession of land used to give is still exemplified in the titles of "landlord" and "landlady." The persons are amused at the colored washwoman, for instance, who insists on the term "lady." But let the same woman run a rooming house, of whatever description, and she is not a "landwoman," but a "landlady."

NEW PROCLAMATION ON STOCK DISEASE

Governor Philipp Warns That Danger Is Still Prevalent and That Regulations Must Be Observed.

(Special to the Gazette.)

Madison, Wis., March 27.—A further proclamation on the foot and mouth disease has been issued by Governor Philipp. In it he says that great danger still exists as to the further introduction of such disease into the state or territory where such shipments originate from or pass through an infected state except such animals as are consigned to Milwaukee or Cudahy yards for immediate slaughter. Horses which shall have been in or are now in the Union Stock yards at Chicago shall not be transported or driven into the state. Restrictions are also made as to the certification of sacks of grain shipped into the state or the movement of the goods in immigrant wagons. The counties of Dodge, La Fayette, Green and Adams in Washington county, and Hazel Green and Jamison in Grant county, the counties of Dane, Rock, Walworth, Racine, Jefferson, Waukesha, Brown, Lincoln and Langlade are and shall be in such quarantine as the United States bureau of animal industry shall provide and in accordance with the restrictions of the state veterinarian.
